Mayor Garry stated the minutes from prior meeting dated August 28, 2023, September 11, 2023 regular meeting and September 11, 2023 Emergency meeting would be approved as presented unless there are any corrections or objections. Councilman Bryant made a motion to approve of the minutes as presented, seconded by Councilman Martin. Mayor Garry stated no objections were made at this time and the minutes from prior meeting dated August 28, 2023, September 11, 2023 regular meeting and September 11, 2023 Emergency meeting were approved unanimously. City Clerk Shaw stated three Pro Tempore Judges will be on the list with the approval of this addition. Councilman Bryant stated the Pro Tempore Judges will be paid in the amount of $150.00 for a half day and $300.00 for a full day which he agrees with.

Councilman Bryant made a motion to approve agenda item number seven as presented, seconded by Councilman Martin. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously.

Approve the Third Amendment for Judicial Services; Effective July 1, 2023. The City of Yerington shall pay Judge an additional $975.00 pursuant to the terms and conditions of the cooperative agreement between the City of Yerington and Lyon County dated July 7, 2023.

City Manager Switzer stated two amendments to the agreement have been approved already with the recent changes and additional monies if passed would be due to the Judge in the amount of $975.00. City Manager Switzer recommends approval of this agenda item.

Councilman Bryant made a motion to approve agenda item number eight as presented, seconded by Councilman Martin. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously.

Approve a contract with DOWL Engineering, 5510 Longley Lane, Reno, NV 89511, for a comprehensive update to the City of Yerington's Master Plan for an estimated not to exceed amount of $155,880.00

City Manager Switzer stated the current Master Plan was last completed in 2005 and many things have changed since then. An update to the zoning map needs to be completed for the future growth of the City's. The update is a requirement to receive future grants and to ensure that the City has done their due diligence. City Manager Switzer would recommend approval of this agenda item and the project will take about one to two years to complete. The scope of the work includes community wide meetings, input from the public and heavy involvement with the Yerington Planning Commission. Councilman Bryant stated the engineering company lists five different tasks for the project and estimated a time line of about eighteen months.

Councilman Pizzo made a motion to approve the agenda item, seconded by Councilman Martin. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously.

Discussion on introduction of Ordinance Number 2023-04, Bill Number 429 on adopting an increase in the City's Transient Room Tax from five percent (5%) to ten percent (10%) on first reading by title.

City Manager Switzer stated pursuant with the discussion at the City Council level, the City is looking into increasing the transient room tax rate in order to be in line with amount of $45,000.00. If the concept is passed today, the cost options would be brought back to City Council for final approval.

Councilman Bryant stated Public Works should proceed with adding the seating in the middle section and planning for the vehicle access to maintain the areas. Public Works Director Flakus stated the City is hoping for an opening date of May 2024. Councilman Bryant stated for the obstacle course would there be access on the south end. Public Works Director Flakus stated another gate can be added for access. Councilman Bryant recommended to remove the sidewalk access on the north end of the dog park and add or move the sidewalk on the south end instead by the parking lot. Public Works Director Flakus stated the fencing and water lines would be completed by Public Works with the termination of power and water past the Dog Park for future improvements.

Mayor Garry asked for comments. Ms. Susan Parker suggested to use a sand surface which would make some areas less water and maintenance intensive. Seed clover should be used in all other areas and the obstacle course would be a huge expense for the City with repairs if needed. Cement pads should be added surrounding a water distribution area and by using gravel instead.

Ms. Chantae Lessard stated turf has a smell to it and is harder to clean up but sand has the same issue and is not sanitary. Grass should be considered as well as the additional seating around the area.

Public Works Director Flakus stated City Council could table this agenda item and more options could be considered with updated pricing. Six hundred and eighty linear feet of fencing with poles needs to be installed as well as man access gates and vehicle access gates. City Manager Switzer suggested to approve the concept of the layout of the Dog Park then to come back with different options regarding each area. Councilman Bryant suggested to add a gate entering into another gate as a holding area for the dog area. Public Works Director Flakus stated a sketch of that concept will be added into the idea. Mayor Garry agrees on the size and suggested to give Public Works Director Flakus the option to pick the most sanitary and safest surface for a Dog Park then a final decision could be made from City Council.

Mayor Garry asked for comments and no further comments were made.

Councilman Bryant made a motion to approve the square footage and layout of the Dog Park and at a future date, City Council will decide on the details, seconded by Councilman Martin. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously.

Page six are the expenditures for the marijuana compact showing meeting was held regarding Miller Lane and to push in as much traffic to town as possible for more business. A consensus was given for the traffic to be turned towards town.

Mayor Garry stated he is working with City Manager Switzer to reach out to the Congressman's Office, Horsford and Amodei. Dini's Lucky Club is coming up on their 90th anniversary and citizens should come out to support them. On October 27th is the Ribbon Cutting for Not Just Candles moving to a location on Main Street to help elevate the charm downtown. A Mayoral Proclamation around Christmas will be given for all the businesses participating in the Christmas Parade. The community should do as much as possible to make this a great experience and a very festive holiday.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

The meeting was called to order within the James Sanford Community Center and roll call was reported by Mayor Garry. The Pledge of Allegiance was led by Mayor Garry.

Public Participation

Mayor Garry asked for comments.

Lyon County Sherriff Brad Pope stated the body camera providers will be changing soon. Yerington Police Department has about seven hundred videos that do not have information provided to classify the videos and these videos would be provided as evidence within the current cases. A lot of data will need to be transferred in order to save those videos and will cost Lyon County a lot of money, which is not a fair burden to be paid by the tax payers. The body cameras will cost about $550.00 per year per tetra bytes. A Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) needs to be in place for the shared cost of the body cameras. Lyon County Sherriff Pope does not appreciate the unprofessionalism with City Council and members, which causes a divide between the City of Yerington and the Lyon County Sherriff's Office. City Attorney Zumpft asked the difference between classified and unclassified videos. Lyon County Sherriff Pope stated unclassified videos have no information manually provided. Councilman Galvin added it means that an officer did not go into that video to include the information about the citation. City Manager Switzer requested to have the quotes forwarded to his office when Lyon County Sherriff Pope receives them.

Ms. Rhiannon Baker, Supervisor with the Yerington Senior Center thanked the City for their help with the Craft Festival event, which was very successful. Presentation by Western Nevada Development District (WNDD) for potential membership with the organization. Representatives of WNDD will be present to inform the Council on the purpose and benefits of membership.

Ms. Chris Brandon and Mr. Don Vetter provided a presentation to City Council. The United States Department of Commerce created WNDD, which is a non-profit organization that maintains the district and provides match funding through the membership costs. The WNDD met with City Manager Switzer to tour the entire community and the City has many possibilities to receive monies. The City of Yerington is within the district that could receive assistance from WNDD and would be the 7th city to receive the benefits within the district. Mr. Vetter stated what other communities are doing within the district will affect the City of Yerington and cause regional change. Ms. Brandon stated a regional plan or a local strategic plan needs to be created for the City.

Councilman Bryant asked if WNDD has connections with Western Nevada College (WNC). The City is interested to see if WNC can help with the Yerington Police Department officers attending a local police academy instead of out of state. The City is also interested in regional recruiting. Mr. Vetter stated WNDD can look into those programs.

Councilman Pizzo asked the cost of the membership to WNDD. Ms. Brandon stated the City would need to pay $5,000.00 per year annually and that amount would be capped.

Councilman Galvin asked City Manager Switzer if he is on board with this. City Manager Switzer stated yes, but this membership is not a budgeted expenditure for this fiscal year. Councilman Bryant stated there is benefit to this and there are several programs that could help the City. Some plans should be established to receive this membership.

City Manager Switzer stated this organization helps with major infrastructure grant funding. The City is already a member of the Northern Nevada Development Authority (NNDA) and could bring in more industry to our local economy. Councilman Bryant requested for periodic updates to City Council. Ms. Brandon stated if the City of Yerington is not happy with their membership, the annual membership would not need to be renewed.

Councilman Bryant made a motion to approve item number seven with help for aviation improvements and local recruiting at WNC for law enforcement, seconded by Councilman Pizzo. Mayor Garry asked for comments. Ms. Deb DeGrendele stated she recommends approving this action and it would benefit the City of Yerington. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no further comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously.

For Emergency Action: Discussion and Consideration for Adoption of Ordinance 2023-05, Bill No. 430, Authorizing and Directing the Issuance of the City of Yerington, Nevada, Wastewater Revenue Bond, Series 2023A in the Principal Amount of Not to Exceed $8,577,000.00 and the City of Yerington, Nevada, Wastewater Revenue Bond Series 2023B in the Principal Amount of Not to Exceed $7,000,000.00 to Refinance a Sewerage Project, as Defined in NRS 268.714; Providing the Forms, Terms, Conditions and Security for the Bonds and the Sale to the United States of America; Providing for Adoption as if an Emergency Exists; and Providing Other Matters Relating Thereto.

City Manager Switzer stated last month the City had a similar action and the only changes to this Ordinance is the not to exceed clause has been inserted within the document. Additional verbiage was provided by the City's Bond Counsel for the project.

For bond sales or purchases, City Council can act in an emergency action as well as adopting the motion as an emergency. If City Council wants to move forward, the vote would need to be unanimous. City Manager Switzer recommends for City Council to declare this Ordinance an emergency and provide a unanimous approval. The date set for the bond sale is on October 25, 2023.

Councilman Bryant made a motion to approve agenda item number eight as presented, seconded by Councilman Galvin. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously with four ayes and zero nays.

For Emergency Action: Discussion and Consideration and Possible Adoption of Ordinance 2023-06, Bill No. 431, Authorizing and Directing the Issuance of the City of Yerington, Nevada, Water Revenue Bond, Series 2023A in the Principal Amount of Not to Exceed $9,901,000.00 and the City of Yerington, Nevada, Water Revenue Bond Series 2023B in the Principal Amount of Not to Exceed $7,352,000.00 to Refinance a Water Project, as Defined in NRS 268.728; Providing Forms, Terms, Conditions and Security for the Bonds and the Sale to the United States of America; Providing for Adoption as if an Emergency Exists; and Providing Other Matters Relating Thereto.

Councilman Galvin made a motion to approve agenda item number nine as presented, seconded by Councilman Martin. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously with four ayes and zero nays.

Approve the City's contracted engineering firm's recommendation to approve conditional lien releases with the construction company Q&D for final payment of the water/sewer infrastructure project.

City Manager Switzer stated an issue arose with Q&D Construction, United Stated Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the City of Yerington. In summary, Q&D Construction requests to have their final payment on the Water and Sewer Project with a conditional lien release basis. Q&D Construction will wait to pay the subcontractors, about 25 in total, after the final payment is received by the City. USDA states the final payment must be issued under the unconditional lien release condition. All subcontractors need to be paid for the project before final payment of the project is paid or issued. If the payment is released with the conditional lien releases, the City could be exposed to potential liabilities.

Councilman Galvin stated he does not believe the City should put ourselves in the wrong position and does not trust Q&D Construction. City Manager Switzer stated the USDA recommends unconditional lien release while Q&D Construction and DOWL, LLC recommends conditional lien releases. The issue has been reviewed with City Attorney Zumpft and the language states that DOWL, LLC is recommending that the City moves forward with the conditional lien releases and provides an amendment to the current construction contract. Councilman Galvin asked if the City pays Q&D Construction, how long is the warranty. City Manager Switzer stated all warranties have to be presented to the City. Public Works Director Flakus added the warranties are for a one-year period once the work was completed. The City can pursue the claims for up to one year. Mayor Garry stated Q&D Construction would be committed to perform the issues about the spot work and the work has not been completed yet. City Manager Switzer stated there are several spot areas that need to be addressed and updated still.

City Manager Switzer stated the City is always subject to litigation but if the City is not 100% comfortable, an amendment to the contract for the work can be completed. The City is requesting approval of the conditional lien releases recommended by DOWL, LLC and to provide an amendment to cover the City.

Councilman Bryant made a motion to approve agenda item number ten with the amendment with USDA, seconded by Councilman Pizzo. Mayor Garry asked for comments, no comments were made at this time and the motion was approved unanimously.

Public Participation

Mayor Garry asked for comments and no comments were provided at this time.

Department Reports

Chief of Police Wagner stated several years ago the legislature wanted to enforce body cameras. All uniform law enforcement now has to wear body cameras. The funding was provided to Lyon County to fund the body cameras for the Yerington Police Department as a shared funding stream. The Lyon County Board of Commissioners decided to move forward with the federal laws instead of the state laws. The current body camera contract with Motorola and will need to entered into a contract with a new vendor. The Yerington Police Department is waiting for quotes and proposals, then this issue will need to be addressed within the near future. Councilman Galvin added the current body cameras will not be supported with a new vendor and the body cameras would need to interface with Spillman.

Public Works Director Flakus stated NV Energy is working on the power issue over at Mountain View Park regarding the new restrooms. The Public Works Department is moving forward with all of the projects assigned and will also be helping with the holiday parties, Halloween and Christmas. The school zone changes are still be worked on as well. The Airport Fly-In was over this past weekend and a new sign is currently at the Yerington Municipal Airport.

Building Official Browns stated within September, an amount of $3,355.75 was received for building permits.

City Manager Switzer stated an Aviation Club is currently at the Lyon County School District and the Yerington Municipal Airport should have an Aviation School to help train pilots, which this field of study currently has a shortage of pilots nationwide.

Councilman Pizzo stated the Airport Fly-In was very successful. Thank you to Public Works Director Flakus, the Public Works Department, Rotary Club and the K-9 units for attending and helping at the event. The City is looking to make this event better and bigger next year.

Councilman Bryant stated for two months now, Lyon County Sherriff's Office has been posting the mug shots of defendants on Facebook, which does not lend a lot of knowledge to the community. The statistics are a more meaningful tool to the community and provides more information than the mug shots. The transparency on social media is a great tool for the Lyon County Sherriff's Office and does provide a lot of awareness.

Councilman Galvin stated the statistics with the arrests between the Lyon County Sherriff's Office and the Yerington Police Department would be embarrassing for the City and would not show a good light for the City of Yerington.

Mayor Garry stated the Airport Fly-In did not get the military response like the City hoped but Mayor Garry will be meeting General Waters at the end of November. City Hall was named after the late General Robert T. Herbert and the City will work to build those relationships again with the National Guard. In 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared Columbus Day a national immigrant holiday. Happy Columbus Day.

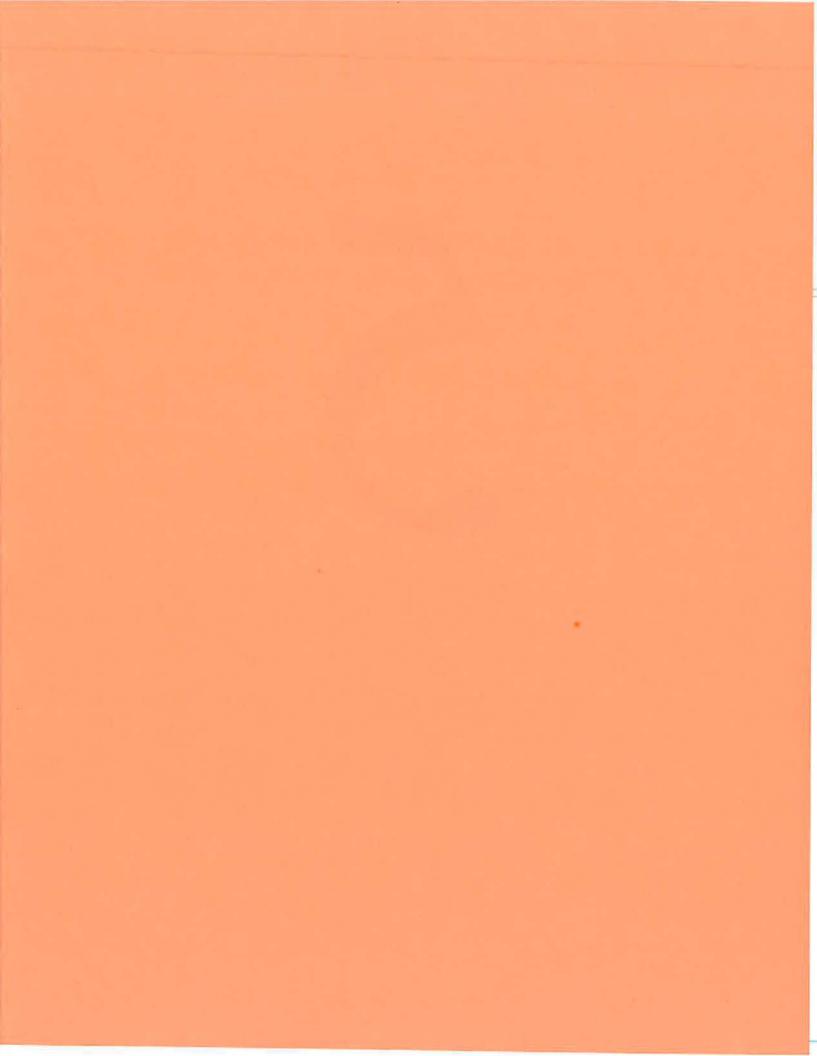

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

RECITALS

- WHEREAS, The GID and the City entered into the Interlocal Contract on January 2, 2007, to allow sewer flow from the Grand Estates subdivision in Yerington to enter the GID and be treated at the wastewater treatment plant, located at the corner of Silverado Road and Scarsdale Road in Yerington; and
- 2. WHEREAS, the Interlocal Contract states the City shall collect connection fees at the time of a final map.

WHEREAS, on July 19, 2007, the Willowcreek General Improvement District Board of Trustees passed, approved, and adopted Resolution 07-15, which amended the Willowcreek GID Water and Wastewater Regulations to provide that sewer and water connection fees are to be paid at the time of each new water and sewer connection; and
- 4. WHEREAS, the Grand Estates lift station and force main are maintained and operated by the City, and it is commonly known that sewage at the end of a force main can produce a significant odor and cause corrosion problems; and
- 5. WHEREAS, the GID and the City wish to amend the Interlocal Contract to accommodate the amendment to the Willowcreek GID Water and Wastewater Regulations that was adopted after the Interlocal Contract was entered and to address potential excessive odor and corrosion concerns at or above hydrogen sulfide levels of 50 mg/l.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing and the mutual promises and undertaking stated herein, the parties agree as follows:

1. The City will assess and collect connection fees just prior to issuing a building permit and transmit this fee to the GID within 30 days of collection.

- 2. The City will monitor the manhole where the Grand Estates sewer force main enters the GID for excessive odors and signs of corrosion when hydrogen sulfide levels are at or above 50 mg/l. I. Introduction

Following a 4-0 vote from City Council on July, 24, 2023, I was hired on a short-term basis to conduct an assessment of the Yerington Police Department and subsequently provide a report that includes technical assistance. This document represents that report.

Implications

We would all be heroes if this report delivered great news only; perhaps just subtle recommendations and a pathway to save a great deal of money while not cutting the delivery of police services. This, however, is not realistic nor will be the case here. Instead, I have some difficult but nonetheless important news to deliver but trust that doing so will prove valuable moving forward.

Target Audience

Although this report is target specific for the city's management team (i.e. Mayor, Councilmembers, City Manager) and every member of the police department, the community may find it of great value and interest, as well. First, there was a level of participation from the Community Public Safety Survey and the results are represented later in this report. Secondly, aspects on the function and framework of the police department are represented along with some technical assistance. The community becoming familiar with these details and partnering with the police department is an effective way to create community consensus on establishing reasonable public safety goals.

This report aims to be presented in a fashion that speaks to a broad audience. The narrative will attempt to be void of police jargon, acronyms, and material not appropriate for public consumption. Attention will be given to briefly explain words and terms that are mostly used in the profession of law enforcement to foster community understanding. The report will provide direction, technical assistance, leader and follower tips, and best practices. It will also confront rumors and speculation, as conjectures not addressed quickly tend to fester and cause harm in organizations and individuals alike.

Background

I was informed the need for such an assessment was based on the city's sincere desire to support the police department but with uncertainty on how best to do so. The city felt it had been responsive to recent requests for new police vehicles, safety equipment, firearms, a non-lethal platform, a K9 program, evidence storage measures, and more.

Questions lingered, however, concerning what level of support was reasonable and how best to move forward on future decision-making. The police chief had requested assistance previously with the police department's organizational structure. On occasion, city management members received information from some police officers who questioned certain internal processes and the leadership style inside the police department.

City of Yerington, Nevada Police Department Assessment Framing Future Operational Standards and The Delivery of Police Services Ted Stec – City Police Consultant August - October, 2023

Those asking for assistance and questioning internal processes did not file official, written grievances and there were no allegations of a criminal nature. The city found it challenging to determine the veracity of comments and needs. The city last year provided an internal survey for the police department to help ferret out helpful information. Simple changes began to occur in the areas of building maintenance, cleanliness, and enhanced communication. Though these minor changes were acknowledged and appreciated, the city felt compelled to dive deeper and close the loop on any lingering issues, reported or not. An objective assessment of the police department from an outside source was deemed appropriate for the city and on behalf of the community it serves.

The crippling effects of the recent pandemic were also mentioned. Those challenges represent another piece that tends to support an assessment to help ensure a pandemic rebound and a healthy police agency moving forward.

I am confident from my experiences that the pandemic to a certain extent caused people to act out and say things they ordinarily would not have. It was a confusing, frustrating, and concerning period of time to say the least. That setting saw a number of different deployment strategies from law enforcement agencies across the nation that were simply trying to find the right balance under an unpredictable environment. But, in reality, true balance was not achievable. So as to not cloud decisions moving forward, I am suggesting everyone separate feelings, opinions, grudges, and political views reached during the pandemic from this post-pandemic period. Study the assessment and look through a lens that focuses on local law enforcement today and moving forward.

City Councilmember One-on-Ones

Each manager related a sincere interest in supporting law enforcement to ensure a safe community. The majority preferred retaining the police department and simply working toward fine tuning it after receiving technical assistance from the assessment. There was some contemplation about contracting out police services to the local Sheriff's Office. The thoughts in support were speculative in nature and perhaps flavored a bit with potential preference but all together, a topic that emerges now and then in various jurisdictions.

Caution should be exercised on outwardly and continually talking about contracting out as doing so undermines recruiting and retention efforts, the confidence and morale of those working for the police department, and can also divide the community.

The city management team should all be commended for their curiosity and having the courage to be assessed by an outside source knowing that potentially unflattering and difficult information to deal with could be revealed. Their actions demonstrate proper governance - accountability and transparency.

Additional thoughts expressed during my individual conversations with this group consisted of determining the effectiveness of the police department from the top-down. Learning about leadership styles, command presence, what's most effective for this city, and the typical reasons police officers complain (i.e. sincere or contrived?). What type of accountability measures should be in place that perhaps members of the community and the police department would appreciate? Would GPS on police cars be reasonable? Do we really need a K9 and, if so, what data should we expect to justify the program? What is the promotional process and are we effectively preparing officers? Are the minimum standards normal therefore, creating a safety net that prevents an under-qualified officer from promoting too soon and thus, failing? What is the process of separating rumors from facts? Are we buying locally and using local services whenever reasonable? Are crime statistics being gathered, entered in a timely fashion, and forwarded to requesting data collecting agencies? What is the typical flow and efficiency of report writing and approval? Are solvable cases moving forward? What level of oversight and autonomy do the officers experience? Is the agency consistently in state training compliance and what types of training are they receiving? Is the department capable of being more visible to deter crime and provide the sense of safety to the community? Can the drug problem be addressed more vigorously? Can there be a greater social media presence to keep the community informed? By way of comparison, are officers in other agencies more productive? Should a "good ol' boy" system or similar be present, that must stop.

This document presents research on the Yerington Police Department as well as details on various parts that make up and drive the organization. In particular, from a macro perspective, the discussion involves:

- la. The State of the Yerington Police Department
 - 1. Operational Standards
 - 2. Support Services
 - 3. Organizational Structure
 - 4. Policy and Directives
 - 5. Mission, Vision, Core Values

The research focused on assessing crucial areas first and with any project time remaining, address the number of thoughts city management had conveyed. Likely not all questions have been answered herein but a significant number has. The project had a deadline to keep and the importance of providing the discoveries thus far to act upon sooner rather than later was important.

II. Research Methods/Data Sources

Such an analysis must take into account various diverse data sources. These need to entail information from stakeholders, as well. The following is a list of data sources used in this study. This is not a comprehensive list:

- 1. Policy Manual
- 2. Organizational Chart
- 3. Budget
- 4. Training Records

City of Yerington, Nevada Police Department Assessment Framing Future Operational Standards and The Delivery of Police Services Ted Stec – City Police Consultant August - October, 2023

- 5. Vehicle Fleet
- 6. Employee one-on-ones
- 7. City Manager / City Councilmember one-on-ones
- 8. Community survey
- 9. Executive and leadership training
- 10. Professional experiences as a law enforcement executive
- 11. Small agency guide review

The following aims to provide useful information that will assist the city management team with making the critical decisions of how best to provide police services in the City of Yerington.

IIa. Thought Provoking Statements

Broadening the thought processes

- 1. Scaling focusing on the police department to get more out of it in terms of serving the community while keeping costs from rising at an equal level
- 2. With community support, pivoting toward a new Mission, set of goals, core values, and a progressive organizational chart and deployment strategy that clearly falls under a leading community-based or community-oriented policing (COPS) model.
 - a) Per the USDOJ, community policing is a philosophy that promotes organizational strategies that support the systematic use of partnerships and problem-solving techniques to proactively address the immediate conditions that give rise to public safety issues such as crime, social disorder, and fear of crime.
- 3. Understanding what's important to the community. Immediate recognition and robust responses to spikes in crime and quality-of-life concerns.
- 4. A mix of sworn and non-sworn personnel strategy problem solvers

III. Overall State of the Yerington Police Department

Illa. Sir Robert Peel:

Back in 1829, Sir Robert Peel established the London Metropolitan Police Force. He became known as the "Father of Modern Policing," and his commissioners established the list of policing principles that remain as crucial and urgent today as they were two centuries ago. Sir Robert Peel's Policing Principles - Law Enforcement Action Partnership

Peel's three core ideas are below, which should be helpful while contemplating what you feel might be best for the Yerington Police Department in terms of the delivery of police services:

- 1. The goal is preventing crime, not catching criminals. If the police stop crime before it happens, we don't have to punish citizens or suppress their rights. An effective police department doesn't have high arrest stats; its community has low crime rates.
- 2. The key to preventing crime is earning public support. Every community member must share the responsibility of preventing crime, as if they were all volunteer members of the force. They will only accept this responsibility if the community supports and trusts the police.
- 3. The police earn public support by respecting community principles. Winning public approval requires hard work to build reputation: enforcing the laws impartially, hiring officers who represent and understand the community, and using force only as a last resort.

Recommendations

- o Introduce the Peel Policing principles and core ideas
- Let others who are capable and interested augment certain duties and projects on behalf of the department

Discussion

As a conversation starter, reveal the stunning, historical information above both internally and externally. It is quite impressive that the purpose of policing was so eloquently stated in the 1800's and remains substantially relevant today. Weave the message and principles into your everyday policing philosophy. It needs to permeate recruitment, retention, policy development, training, deployment, evaluations, and so on. Should a police applicant or current employee not be moved by this information or simply fails to embrace it, they likely should not be part of the Yerington Police Department.

Realize here and throughout this report that some of my recommendations are easier said than done and in no way, unless otherwise stated, are criticism of anyone. We're simply the government in action and working toward an adjusted game plan that will take time but aims to better serve the community. Some of these recommendations could be all or in part developed by volunteers, student work groups, or service organization sub-groups. Let others who are capable and interested augment certain duties and projects on behalf of the department.

IIIb. The Yerington Police Department webpage

- 1. None
- 2. City webpage has a Public Safety tab

Recommendations

- o Edit City's webpage
- o Create an inviting and responsive Police Department webpage

Discussion

A search of the city's webpage does not reveal immediate police access. A user must search. Under the Government tab revealed a busy but important list. It included two "Public Safety" bullet points: 1) Public Safety Committee and 2) Public Safety.

"Public Safety Committee": "What is that?" a citizen might think. The website does not provide an explanation or accomplishments on what seemingly would be interpreted as something good for the community.

"Public Safety": Replace with "Police". This bullet point for law enforcement should not be included where it is – buried and combined with non-police items. This is simply due to the nature on which the public contacts the police. Think emergency here and the hesitation in some instances to report. A current practice beyond the traditional, long-standing "911" call is now reaching out to the police via text and social media platforms to include on bonified "911" calls. Further, victims of certain crimes can feel shame and guilt, which makes contacting the police a very difficult task for them. Therefore, careful consideration and efforts must be made to ensure it is very easy, flexible, and inviting to reach the police.

Create a POLICE tab that is prominent the moment a user accesses the city's website considering that, yes, someone just might need immediate assistance and for whatever reason chooses the city website for help. A user selecting that POLICE tab would then be directed to the police department's website.

The police department must have its own, robust website that provides a host of helpful information that serves a diverse user population. Start reviewing a number of law enforcement websites, taking note of page layout, features, tools, and more. Also determine any ADA requirements while developing the new website.

Here are just a handful of basic headings for a law enforcement webpage that when completed can be helpful, enhance the department's image and level of communication, and even foster recruitment:

- Department Overview
- Mission Statement
- Vision Statement (Optional)
- o Core Values
- o Motto
- o Goals
- Recruitment / Jobs / Online application
- Send us a message or a tip
- Complete your own (non-emergency) crime report
- Photo Gallery
- Press Releases

- Social Media links
- o Department Policy link

IIIc. Department Policy Manual

- 1. It is 20-plus years old
- 2. No link to it on the website

Recommendations

- Embrace but augment current policy; or
- o Select a new vendor

Discussion

Despite its age, the policy is functional and with substantial guidance that still stands strong today. Following it in conjunction with legal updates from various sources, certified training officers receive on an on-going basis, administrative directives from the chief regarding new laws (i.e. duty to intervene, body-worn-camera use), proper field supervision, and, of course, use of common sense, would tend to keep officers out of legal trouble.

Risk here, however, still exists. Having an old policy is ripe for litigation should there be some type of incident that finds its way into the courts. The old policy would be gone over with a fine-tooth comb and relevant inconsistencies, if any, could be highlighted.

Beyond the published date of a policy manual, officers receive updates and training. They are required to follow current standards and refrain from falling back on old or outdated material. The best practice, however, is to have a modern policy with a responsive feature that pushes out updates in existing policy, new policies, along with quizzes and attestations.

I reviewed the bulk of the policy manual to include the critical or high-risk policies along with others germane to my research:

- Use-of-force (UOF)
- Officer-Involved-Shooting (OIS)
- Firearms, Less-Lethal
- o Pursuits
- o Organizational Chart
- o Mission Statement
- Code of Ethics, General Rules, Conduct
- Press Relations
- Mandatory notification list

I see three choices here on how to address this old policy:

- Should the chief feel the current policy has been working well to include no reported conflicts, continue moving forward with necessary administrative updates and ensure a robust training program.
- 2) Extract out the critical policies for insurance pool review. Should changes be recommended, do so immediately, continue moving forward with necessary administrative updates, and ensure a robust training program.
- 3) Move to Lexipol Public Safety Policy and Training Solutions. Lexipol policy has been around for a long time. Here are the pros and cons from my use and management of the system:
- Pros: Competent, relevant, thorough, policy + training + risk reduction + litigation support; Sourcewell vendor, State of Nevada recognized; insurance provider supported; potential financial assistance eligible through insurance company, the state, and grants
- Cons: Cost of the policy, ongoing maintenance fees, an increase in staffing to properly manage the program

Although I used "Cons" above, this was just for illustrative purposes. There really are not any cons of Lexipol when considering the clear measurables delivered early on after the roll out plus the risk reduction value.

What exists are just challenges. The roll out demands a particularly skilled, nearly full-time employee for many months. It also involves every employee of the police department to steadily engage with the new policies being rolled out, report suggestions, and then accept. After the roll out, the skilled employee remains and continues to manage the program, maximizing all of the features that assist the department. Managing it never ends. But, once the skilled employee is proficient and has all systems working full-speed-ahead, some room becomes available to accept other responsibilities in the department (i.e. PIO, Property & Evidence, Administrative Services).

Failure occurs when the wrong person is assigned to manage the program or when an existing full-time employee is saddled with trying to "fit it in" between other duties. Another potential failure is not having an adequate supervisor in charge to ensure the program is supported and running as intended. As of the writing of this report, I learned about another law enforcement agency that subscribed to Lexipol but fell short on the ongoing management piece, further illustrating points made here about ensuring the right people are in charge of it.

Policy is not something you buy to satisfy a checklist or to get a pat on the back but rather, it is a living, breathing, essential set of documents on which the police agency pledges to follow.

The digital training feature is called, Daily Training Bulletins or DTBs. They are just a logon and click away to begin. Lexipol provides policy reviews, scenarios, legal updates, and more. The process is electronically captured for the training and compliance records.

I reached out to Lexipol for a proposal. Note: I am not on the Lexipol Board nor have financial interest in the company:

Implementation Project: This is a one-time cost of just under $20,000.00. It involves Lexipol doing the heavy lifting. A rep rolls out under 10 policies a week for the chief and designees to approve. Some editing can occur. It takes about 6-9 months to approve the entire Lexipol Policy Manual. When agencies handle the implementation themselves, on average it takes much longer to finish.

The roll out consists of five phases:

- 1. High-Risk Policies
- 2. High-Liability Policies
- 3. Daily Operations Policies
- 4. Personnel Protection Policies
- 5. Operational Consistency Policies

The ongoing maintenance and features annual subscription cost is about $7,800.00.

Recommendation

• Consider these helpful excerpts while contemplating the delivery of police services here in Yerington, NV:

Discussion

Staffing Levels

Once staffing levels have been established, the department should compare its salary and benefits package to other agencies in the surrounding area. Studies have shown money is not a motivator, but absence of money is a de-motivator. It is important to keep pace with the pay schedule.

Employee turnover

Traditionally, staff turnover has been considered a cost of doing business. The expenditures do not appear as a line item. Little attention is given to the cost of losing an experienced employee. Many smaller agencies become "training grounds" for larger agencies or private companies.

Economic Development

More communities are starting to realize public safety is an issue of economic and industrial development. Businesses looking to locate or expand operations examine the quality of life in communities. The ability of the police to address citizen's fear of crime can influence the perception of the community as a whole.

Ille. Police Department Details

Recommendations

- o Shore up the organizational chart
- o Bring Position Descriptions (aka: Job Descriptions) up-to-date
- Chief disengage from non-chief duties
- o Chief re-engage in chief related duties
- A reset of the recent investigator position created
- City Councilmember et al mindfulness
- o Back-up plan shared access
- Training and support for Administrative Services
- Police Department building
- Property and Evidence intervention / management / audits
- Body Worn Camera (BWC) contract / management / audits
- Recruitment / Over hire strategy

Discussion

I found the staff at the police department helpful with the assessment. All appeared candid and expressed eagerness at the potential of making some positive changes. They are willing to help and appeared capable of providing excellent service within their individual levels of training and experience. They expressed a sincere interest in policing here in Yerington.

Total authorized sworn is one (1) police chief and eight (8) police officers for the 24/7 operation. Police officer field deployment, however, is currently down two (2) positions. Of the six (6) current police officers, one (1) is a recent hire therefore, considered probationary. The police department's organizational chart reveals past police lieutenant and sergeant positions.

- 1 Police Chief Darren Wagner
- 0 Police Lieutenant (vacant since 2007)
- 0 Police Sergeant (vacant since approx. 2000-2001)
- 1 Police Officer / FTO / Investigator / Brandon Coombs
- 1 Police Officer / FTO / SRO / Nicholas Wisner
- 1 Police Officer Richard Jennerjohn
- 1 Police Officer Jeremiah Brown
- 1 Police Officer Andrew Sanabia
- 1 Police Officer / K9 / Jarrod Adams

1 - Police Officer (vacant)

1 - Police Officer (vacant)

There are no supplemental positions such as reserve police officers, non-sworn code enforcement officers, parking enforcement officers, or volunteers.

Deployment

The approved eight officer positions falls short of being able to provide the community with two patrol officers for each 12-hour shift throughout the year. Officers frequently work solo, which dramatically changes deployment strategies and tends to trigger citizens' complaints or at least, dissatisfaction. The community generally expects high visibility from its police, quick response times, and the efficient tackling of reported issues. They are typically not in the mood to hear the excuse that only one officer is on the street. They expect better. Running solo also interrupts the duties of the chief and the new investigator, who temporarily must stop what they are doing to assist the solo patrol officer or even work a shift. More to follow on this topic.

Population vs Service Population

The research revealed a demographer recently placed the city population at about 3,500. City officials, however, have a sense that the population is actually broader. For law enforcement in terms of determining minimum deployment standards, it is important to recognize the likely service population. Beyond those who reside in the city include daily influx, tourism, events, and migrant workers. The city footprint has grown over the years and is estimated to be at about 29.5 square miles now. This size must also be considered in terms of the daily deployment standards and response times.

- o Ability to perform as a patrol supervisor (under Essential Functions)

Position Descriptions and Job Announcements

The aforementioned job descriptions could use refreshing to ensure modern details and minimum qualifications. Updating existing job descriptions would be a fairly easy project since there are so many samples readily available. Open position announcements ought to have a checklist to follow to ensure all proper steps, completeness, and consistency. More to follow under a recruitment section.

Organizational Vulnerability

The department is lacking a command and supervisory structure, which are essential in a police organization. I did not dive deep into the reason or cause for not filling the lieutenant and sergeant positions since that occurred so long ago. There has been a salary savings for all of these years but at some point, failing to fill the positions has expectedly become a problem. In hindsight, perhaps had the department been supported a bit more – incrementally – the bulk of the recommendations herein would not be present.

We can only imagine today the increased level of job satisfaction and overall effectiveness of the Yerington Police Department had the organizational chart been followed

A police chief taking on non-chief positions and tasks is highly problematic on a number of levels. First, chief level responsibilities suffer. Next, it is ripe for opening the door to criticism a) from folks who innocently do not understand the "why" should they recognize a weakness in the organization b) employees who sense the disorganization and c) anyone internally or externally who chooses to exploit the deficiencies within the organization to further a personal agenda.

A chief should look like a chief, act like a chief, and spend the bulk of his time advancing the agency's professional agenda

An organization with a faulty structure can cause morale to drop. Low morale is associated with employee turn-over, increased frequency of reported work-related illnesses, and a decline of productivity to name a few. A Police1 article titled, What really impacts morale in policing?, dated May, 2022, by Police Commissioner Chris D. Lewis (Ret.), author and subject matter expert, details relevant information on causes of low morale:

- o Low staffing levels
- o Poor infrastructure (i.e. technology, vehicles, equipment, and building)
- o Failed leadership

Although police officers are understandably held to a higher standard and the profession is certainly noble, those characteristics do not prevent all misconduct. I am embarrassed to write here that a small percentage engage in regrettable to reprehensible behavior. A police chief on a leadership island so to speak would be substantially hamstrung while attempting to maintain expectations and thus, vulnerable to the sharks. The current chief will announce retirement someday. Without some updating to include the department structure, I suspect the applicant pool might be rather shallow and weak on qualifications. Qualified applicants look deep and measure the strengths and weaknesses of the organization before determining whether or not to apply. The not-so-qualified applicants are just trying to get started, anywhere, and hope their resume shortfalls are not noticed. Considering a not-so-qualified applicant is akin to buying trouble.

Lieutenant

The rank of lieutenant is versatile and typically considered a middle-management position. It is above the rank of sergeant and is often utilized as the watch commander on patrol, providing technical assistance and oversight to the sergeants. Alternatively, the lieutenant can be purely an administrative position. Lieutenants in the past here in Yerington appeared to have had a dual role of administrative work for the chief and assisting patrol.

Filling the lieutenant's position would be helpful to the organization and remedy some of what has already been discussed. The gap, however, is that one lieutenant could not cover the 24/7 operation. Meaning, patrol would not have as much support as what is needed and deserved. The former structure that included one lieutenant and one sergeant covered more real estate so to speak but is too vertical and unbalanced in my view although much better than what the organization has today. It also created a sense of succession planning. Should the area increase in service population or demand, so too should the rank and file in the police department.

A word of caution here: Skipping rank is risky. Doing so does not guarantee failure but could spell some level of trouble and for a long period of time. A police officer or investigator normally should not promote directly to lieutenant. There are a great deal of experiences – stepping stones – missed by skipping the rank of sergeant. Demonstrating for a period of time excellent work as a bonified sergeant to include superior field supervision, paves the way to a potential successful run at lieutenant or higher. Likewise, excellent work as lieutenant helps set the stage for a promotion to the next higher rank.

Sergeant

The police chief – the department – would benefit greatly with the addition of two sergeants. Just one would be spread too thin since law enforcement is 24/7 and consequently, the needed leadership would predictably fall short. Sergeants, also known as field supervisors, must be highly competent, motivated, and selfless. They supervise patrol, which is commonly referred to as the backbone of law enforcement agencies. The sergeants lead by example, handle day-to-day operations, provide immediate oversight, satisfy complaints, conduct basic audits, approve reports, and more. They do not need permission from the police chief before making routine or emergency decisions. They are respected problem solvers in the community. They are a buffer to, and a loyal spokesperson of, the police chief. The police chief sets the tone and the direction in the agency and the sergeants in this particular discussion ensure that message.

With respect to the selection process for the position of sergeant, this must be taken seriously, even more so than the rank of police officer. A promotion must be earned! This is achieved through hard work over a long period of time, refraining from misconduct, and meeting or preferably exceeding the common minimum standards. Applicants must be able to articulate not only why they have met and exceed the standards but how they would apply this to benefit the agency and the community, as well.

The worst time to begin preparing for a promotion or special assignment is near the date the opportunity is published - that's too late. Start preparing now; be versatile and ready to step up to the plate should you be asked, ordered, or have the sincere interest in the position A promotion should not be exclusively based on seniority, years of service, or the applicant reportedly being close to retirement (i.e. a gift). It should not be given on a hope and a prayer that doing so would somehow miraculously change an officer's history of unwanted or mediocre behavior. It should not be given because someone feels sorry for the applicant for whatever reason or because they are "popular" in town. An agency stuck with an albatross of an officer is not near as consequential as an albatross of a sergeant.

Some might have a quizzical reaction about creating a sergeant's position in a small agency. They might feel doing so would create a top-heavy setting while also recognizing that the sergeant might often "only" supervise one or two people compared to the three-six as often seen in larger agencies. They might feel the chief doesn't do enough anyway, so why delegate to sergeants? Although interesting thoughts, following this position through ends up undermining the organization's potential. Regardless of what a chief is or isn't doing or how many officers are on patrol, each officer deserves access and oversight from a patrol sergeant. The community also deserves access as often, the sergeant is recognized and leaned on as the immediate problem solver on instances of needed clarity or issues beyond the police officer's capability or level of authority.

Back to Chief

The message here, however, is not of delegation to create a cushy, poolside workday for the chief but rather, it is a about opening up the day so the chief can do chief duties - actually increasing focus and work time on the role of the chief. The chief should look like a chief, act like a chief, and spend the bulk of his time advancing the agency's professional agenda. The chief delivers on a larger scale that observant officers, city management, and the community can see and appreciate. The chief, however, would remain aware and be prepared to respond to in-progress crimes and certain emergencies should doing so be helpful.

The chief reportedly by necessity has been engaging in non-chief tasks such as reviewing, declining, and approving reports written by officers, acting as a field training officer (FTO), scheduling, range master, vehicle maintenance, working patrol, and responding to assist afterhours. Those duties are best suited for the rank of sergeant. Sergeants make it happen at the patrol level. They receive specific certified training for the position. They are respected and hold a high regard within and outside of the organization.

Other reported non-chief tasks the chief handles are pre-employment background and internal affairs investigations. That needs to stop immediately. It is not a good practice to be both the investigator and the final arbitrator. A chief should be delegating these types of tasks to qualified outside sources and simply assess the outcomes to arrive at final dispositions.

The chief has also engaged in:

• Organizing the police department's role in the Night in the Country Music Festival to include assisting with the Dispatch Center function

- o The city's periodic Public Safety Committee meetings
- Local Emergency Planning Committee (LEPC)
- Nevada Sheriffs and Police Chiefs Association By-laws Committee
- Risk Management Member Pool Pact
- o Acquisition of free equipment: Humvee, Bull Dozer, Road Grader, Box Vans
- o Grant funding: Polaris Razor
- o Acquisition of new vehicles, equipment, mobile computers, AEDs, rifles
- o '911' Surcharge meetings
- o Special Assignment implementation: SRO, K9, investigator
- Instituted Community-Based tasks for patrol: community engagement contacts and Problem-Oriented-Policing (POP) for city code issues

Here is a list of chief-related duties that can receive focus once non-chief work ends:

- Command Staff crime control meetings
- o Strategic Planning
- o Researching new trends and possibilities
- o Budget development and management
- o Seeking, scrutinizing, and developing grant opportunities
- o Training plan development
- Yearly evaluations for direct reports only
- Dispositions on alleged employee misconduct
- Final hiring decisions
- o Policy and procedure development
- Preparing Staff Reports and presenting to city council
- Periodic spot checks and audits
- o Attending Executive level conferences and training
- o Community engagement
- Attending service and business organization meetings to provide department updates, building relationships and partnerships

Police Officers

There are currently eight (8) funded police officer positions. One assumes the role of school resource officer (SRO). The school district contributes $30,000 per year to the position. One Officer assumes the investigator's position, which the city funds. There is a recent city funded K9 Officer position that is in its infancy.

Putting the cart before the horse

Do these special assignments impact patrol? Yes, since the special assignment positions are not backfilled with new police officers, which is preferred to ensure against gaps and thus, better the chances of success. More to follow on this under Investigator. Also, the K9 officer would likely have a modified shift necessary for that unique assignment and perhaps, even lock-up a particular or premier schedule that others might want someday. All three special assignments, however, are not prohibited from temporarily leaving their specified duties and responding to assist patrol on emergencies. Further, the SRO position tends to handle calls for service in the schools therefore, reducing the impact on patrol. The investigator position can lighten the load on patrol to keep them on the street by taking responsibility of cases that are more complex and thus, time consuming. The K9 special assignment can be an exciting and complementary mixed bag of tricks. One day it might be lightening the load for patrol while the next, consuming a great deal of time under an illicit drug detection type of discovery.

All three special assignments have the potential of significant, measurable successes. The SRO provides an extra level of security at the school and a potential of creating positive, professional, long-lasting relationships between the youth, teachers, and the police. It is ideal, when possible, to have some level of positive intervention assisting the youth with smart decision-making that helps them stay out of the criminal justice system. A K9 program can advance officer safety, engage in drug detection, apprehension, search and rescue, and more, depending on the purpose for the program and training received. The investigator receives criminal reports from police officers that require follow up and in doing so, delivers better case closure and conviction rates. District Attorneys greatly appreciate investigators' efforts to essentially cross the T's and dot the I's before case submissions. The investigator also can generate new cases based on observation or concerning complaints received from the community.

For each assignment to succeed, the right person must be selected. An organization should refrain from lowering standards, bending the rules, forcing a square peg into a round hole, etc. just to fill an assignment. There must be a clear mission, reasonable expectations, and support from an immediate supervisor. Special assignments should not operate without checks and balances that help prevent assignment failure and rogue behavior. Should the projected value not be reached and reasonably sustained, the police chief must recognize this, change course, and also be prepared to end the assignment if necessary. Special assignments should not be taken for granted as a permanent fix to some identified need.

Some stray and create their own Mission. Stop that behavior! There is no self-defined workplace allowed. Standards are designed to be met. (Mark Whittenberg, POST Executive Development Course instructor)

Investigator

There was some level of controversy last year surrounding the testing and job description of a proposed investigator position. Per the chief (and others), he intended it to be a combo investigator – supervisor position, an effort to assist him with certain daily tasks plus be the point person for the agency during his absences. However, much discussion ensued from some officers and the city's management team, resulting in a clumsy process overall with lingering job description uncertainties.

As it stands, it appears to be a special assignment like the SRO and K9 positions but with a touch of leadership duty. This in and of itself is not a big issue in my opinion, as an investigator should investigate but could, on occasion, be a helpful lead (not a sergeant). I understand, however, why the chief wanted a little help since the vacant lieutenant and sergeant positions have never been filled.

This reportedly was a new position proposal from the chief therefore, required city council discussion and approval. It seems logical that this position needs a reset since the roll out and duties are in question. Ideally, this would occur in conjunction with the development of a plan to correct the organizational chart and update job descriptions so as to avoid the need for another reset.

A stunning but predictable revelation

Further, the research revealed additional information that likely will stun and frustrate the city management team. The start date of this position was October, 2022. Roughly one year later, however, very little investigative work has been accomplished. Cases forwarded for follow up investigations have not been tracked in a normal case management style therefore, only percentages, estimations, guesswork, etc. could be relayed to me. Other than one potential sexual assault type of case, it appears there is little to none to write about here in terms of successes. There has not been any crime suppression work, no search warrants written, served, etc. that typically lead to arrests, stolen property recovery, or evidence collection to further an open investigation.

It is my opinion the position of investigator has been nearly a complete failure from the inception. Why? The short answer is creating such a position when the department did not have the capacity to properly support it. Roughly 75% of the investigator's time has been devoted to non-investigator work. For the sake of argument here since the percentage is disappointingly a rough guess, even 25% would be a problem. Because the department's authorized staffing levels are not sound and are currently worsening, the assigned investigator had to be moved back to patrol to cover shifts and also act as a field training officer. What's more, the K9 Officer will soon be away for a long period of time in training and another officer will be out for months due to a needed surgery. How possibly can a fair level of service to the community be provided with such a skeleton crew and what negative impacts does this type of deployment structure have on staff?

A department implementing special assignment positions under a myopic view is analogous to giving a person the gift of a bicycle but without wheels

There have been a number of times in my career where I witnessed this type of setting develop, the red-flags either not seen or ignored, and the subsequent consequences after the roll out. The proposals, however, were made with a good heart just looking for positive outcomes but regrettably, on hope too. Hope should not be a predicate in decision making for law enforcement. I'll close this subsection out by adding that I have also witnessed what I called gimmick positions. A leader proposing some bizarre twist to the tried-and-true chain-of-command structure under a so-called "leadership development" effort.

К9

There was some controversy about the K9 roll out with respect to minimum qualifications and training. The intent was to have a demonstratable standard for the K9 Officer followed by the K9 being dual purpose – drugs and apprehension. As the process moved forward, the standard was altered and subsequently, training became a challenge. The training is necessarily lengthy, disciplined, and rigorous, much different from that of the SRO and investigator assignments. The K9 trainers are certified by state standards and must adhere to the law and regulations. A K9 unit is considered a high-risk, high-liability endeavor. The consequences for acting outside of the policy or law can be severe.

The recruitment understandably contained a "fitness test" requirement. The details may not have been adequately described early on. Once the applications were accepted, there was no pre-screening component with the applicants to move forward or deny. A fit test was scheduled, challenged, cancelled, talk of re-posting, and then challenged again. One or more city council-members reportedly became involved to some extent. Many days later, the city filled the position by a default of sorts. This was a clunky process to say the least and with too many cooks in the kitchen perhaps similar to what happened during the investigator selection process, as well.

Providing a sound and established job description and recruitment announcement, the process of filling the K9 special assignment should have been easy and straight forward. That decision belonged to the chief. Anything less undermines his authority and the overall health of the organization.

City Councilmember Mindfulness

Generally speaking, city councilmembers should be very cautious about creating or allowing a setting where employees skip the grievance process looking for a sympathetic ear. What's more, arriving at a conclusion without all of the data and taking action is very risky on a number of different levels. This would also include complaints received from the public.

The research tended to indicate the perpetuation of unsubstantiated information about certain aspects of the police department. A logical consequence is exaggeration as the chatter moves from one person to the next – a simple concern expressed one day compounds and later is presented as factual. Whomever was the origin of the unsubstantiated information doesn't matter at this point but what does matter is that city officials, managers, and employees must recognize this dynamic and all work together toward minimizing such events. Here are some helpful key points to follow from recent city sponsored training for the city councilmembers that was titled - Governance Effectiveness:

Board Skills

o Be cautious and considerate

Best Practices

o The Board sets priorities and approves strategic direction

Fiduciary Duty

- o Loyalty: Unselfish toward the organization
- o Confidentiality: Certain legal communications and HR matters must remain privileged

The Dysfunctional Board

- o Hidden agendas
- Micromanaging Staff

A long-standing leadership phrase often presented during police training goes like this (or a variation thereof): Praise in public - criticize, accuse, correct, or punish in private.

Special Assignments – Continued

Special assignments vary in complexity and should not necessarily fall under the same Human Resources umbrella with respect to the listed standards. One might be nearly completely cerebral while others demand fitness, a particular skill, or a specific temperament. No matter the special assignment, failure can occur. Officers selected for the K9 unit testing do not always succeed just like those selected to attend the motors training (i.e. motorcycle traffic unit), a tactical team (i.e. SWAT), or beach patrol life guard. There are specific attributes needed to make the cut and not all officers interested in trying reach the higher expectations to secure the position.

Data

In terms of data, the SRO program's success can be summed up by virtue of its continued relationship with the school district. If the district was unhappy with the professional relationship and felt it had little to no benefit, it certainly would not continue paying for it. There has been one "gun on campus" call that resulted in the detention of students, an investigation, and subsequent recovery of the secreted gun on campus.

The investigator position is about one-year old now and is discussed in a different section. The K9 unit deployment is pending. With more time, comes sufficient data to begin an accurate assessment. Moving forward, the chief must reach a point where the value or not of certain aspects of patrol, special assignments, projects, and investigations are routinely assessed and shared with the city management team and the community. Although disappointing when an assignment or project had promise "on paper" but failed to live up to the hype, worse would be ignoring that and perpetuating the failure.

Experts vs Jacks-of-all-Trades, Masters-of-None

A timely tip that I do not own but have said many times over the years: It's better to be experts in a few things than mediocre or worse at a lot of things. I offered this tip during a Command Staff meeting years ago, which had been formulating in my mind for a period of time. Police agencies have a tendency to do too much. Whether it is just trying to give more opportunity to officers under a job morale boosting umbrella, from external pressure, ego, an overzealous grant money grab, engaging in non-police activities, or a "Let's get Mikey to do it" setting, doing too much – being spread too thin – is not sustainable and can backfire. Instead, the focus should be on the primary role of the police and creating the framework on which policing experts are established rather than Jacks-of-all-trades.

Hold monthly crime control meetings. What were the top 10 calls for service? Which ones did we bring to an end, and not? What are we doing about those we did not bring to an end? (Chief John Welter (ret.), POST Executive Development Course instructor).

Reception / Administrative Services

Support Staff in the police department is one, full-time, non-sworn, "Administrative Services" employee, Helen Sturtevant. This position is vital. Duties include: police lobby, reception, fingerprinting, sex and felon registrant; collection, organization, and movement of essential paperwork, data, and records. The police department lobby is generally open Monday – Friday, 8 AM to 5 PM. When reception is not available, telephone calls to the police department are directed to the 24/7 Dispatch Center.

Helen has been employed by the police department for over twenty-years. She is the only one that figurately speaking holds the key to many aspects of her role. It is essential to have a backup plan should Helen become absent or retire. At least one person in the organization should have the same contact list as Helen, access to her Records, emails, etc., and a basic knowledge of her primary duties.

The research revealed a distinct need for training and support to better efficiency to include the capturing and reporting of data. This position needs to evolve into a daily data reporting machine to assist officers and ensure case and investigative accountability. More to follow on this topic under the statistics section.

Crime

Crime is low in Yerington, mostly comprised of nuisance, quality of life, misdemeanor, and infraction types of calls (i.e. alcohol/drug related, mental health, homelessness, thefts, disturbances, traffic). A statistics section follows, which also includes the number of sex crimes and general assaults.

Police Department Building

The building presents itself as dated and perhaps uninviting. The signage is visible but made of temporary material. It is an older building that the police department moved into about three-years ago. It is centrally located, which affords easy public access and quick officer response times, but awkwardly positioned next to other properties and a parking lot.

The interior also presents itself as dated. Front door entry leads to a very small lobby. On one side of the room is a manual fingerprinting station. On the opposite side is a counter and glass partition that gives view into the administrative services staffer and her work area. A locked door separates the lobby from the rest of the building interior.

There is a chief's office, watch commander/investigator office, interview room, an incomplete evidence prep room, evidence holding room, one restroom, storage room, small coffee station, and a squad room where the police officers handle report writing and related duties. The squad room is large enough for the size of the agency. There were at least six desks plus a report writing station long enough for three desk top computers. I saw more than three computers but did not determine how many were operational or when they should be replaced.

Although dated, the chief's office was clean and suitable for a member of the public to visit. However, the overall cleanliness, organization, and feeling of the rest of the department was poor and gloomy. There was an extension cord running down the hallway to provide power into a storage room.

The building is lacking a second restroom, locker rooms, a kitchen, and a training room. The keyless entry and call box near the front door are not functional. The building and parking lot are not adequately secured nor fortified. An off-site, long-term evidence storage area has been identified but not yet in operation.

A remodel and expansion do not appear feasible. Therefore, the city should begin planning for a new police department and one that adequately addresses current observations and legitimate complaints. Refer to the police department one-on-ones for more information.

Property and Evidence

The collection of evidence and storage appear normal. What is also normal in my experience, but unfortunately at the same time a lingering problem, is managing all that has been collected. In this instance, it was estimated that this department's combined evidence volume could fit into a standard two-car garage, which is not too bad. There is likely evidence that is a decade old. The volume represented does not count the two or three vehicles they also have stored.

The challenge is the rate of storage can steadily increase and become out-of-control. The cause of this is that the process to release or purge is very slow. The uninformed might think the task of purging would be fast and easy. Just start at the oldest items and toss them into the dumpster, right? How about holding a garage sale of sorts or have staff take items home to reduce the volume? If it were that easy, however, this discussion item would not be present.

Not to be a broken record, but it is worth repeating that law enforcement is a serious business. The rules of law and policy must be followed, which includes the process of purging property placed in evidence. There are steps that have to be taken to ensure a piece of evidence can and should be purged, which often requires an outside legal source to confirm. Per the policy manual, General Order No. 5.23 5., Disposition of Evidence, A) indicates all items in evidence require a written disposition approval from the District Attorney or City Attorney.

A number of times in my career I observed the stunning amount of property and evidence that had collected for decades with no one in the middle having taken charge to mitigate and organize. I also became acutely aware of one incident where a good-hearted person just trying to tackle the evidence storage monster accidently tossed evidence for pending cases to include some the law required a life-time storage. You can use your imagination here on how the courts, victim(s), the media, command staff, etc. reacted to that stunner.

A common failure with the management of Property and Evidence is giving the responsibility to a person who is already working full-time in the agency. This often unwanted "ancillary duty" is typically not suited for those charged with first-responder duties, investigating, supervising, or Reception/Records. But rather, a person who enjoys working indoors, virtually alone, not timid, has a passion for the process of inventory, can make correct decisions based on the law and policy, is meticulous with record-keeping, and can professionally pester the legal team to quickly signing off on evidence releases when applicable.

Best practices calls for random audits. Policy would drive this and, if followed, serves as a solid safety net to ensure the integrity of the Property and Evidence procedures.

In my experience, the level of priority given to the Property and Evidence function is often low, which is the same case here. To avoid a nightmare down the road, it would be wise to 1) place a qualified, non-sworn person into that role and 2) edit policy that creates the framework to fast-track purging. More to follow under the Grant section below.

Report Writing and Approval Process

Officers did not report any challenges with the report writing module. Once they finish a report, it is electronically delivered to the supervisor for review. In this instance, the only supervisor is the chief. The chief completes the review process and either returns the report with a request for additional work or identifies routing needs. The administrative services staffer has a large piece of this process in terms of receiving reviewed reports from the chief, joining related hard copy documents, ensuring closures, needed routing, and general data entry.

It is normal for police departments to have a steady stream of incomplete or open cases. This occurs from simple procrastination, the officer having pending calls or other interruptions, and instances where needed information for the report is difficult to obtain. To keep this dynamic in check, policy is created. Strict policy dictates that all reports must be completed by the end-of-watch. A flexible policy allows the field supervisor to approve rolling the incomplete report over to the next day. The type of policy and level of flexibility is determined by the chief.

It is my understanding the department's current system does not have an auto-alert feature that pushes out reminder emails regarding unfinished reports. Whether this is the case or not, officers, the chief, and the administrative services person can view status reports that illustrate case history. This provides an adequate level of accountability providing the status of reports are routinely reviewed and action is taken. Better, is for the department to have sergeants who are immediately available to the officers, helpful, and strive to keep the number of open cases to a minimum. See Open Reports under the Statistics section for continued discussion.

Body Worn Cameras (BWC)

The research revealed the contract for BWC's ends this year. It is not yet determined the course of action the chief will take. A financial concern per the chief is the lack of clarity on a potential outside funding source and the distribution formula. At inception, it appears the state law expected law enforcement agencies to pay for the BWC platform but with some level of financial assistance from the 911 surcharge and federal grants. This passage, however, appears to be faulty, as the state cannot dictate to the federal government how the 911 surcharge monies are spent. BWC's are not specifically listed as qualifying items therefore, agencies have refrained from trying to tap into the 911 fund. More to follow under the Grant section below.

In terms of the massive amount of data collected from the use of BWC's, it appears the department is not current with the administrative piece of the platform. Specifically, footage needs a classification input, which triggers the retention values per law and policy. It is important to keep storage in check not only as a matter of management principle but also considering that retention costs are often based on the amount to be stored. While some footage must be kept for a very long time, other types have shorter retention periods. Footage not properly labeled electronically remains in limbo and after a period of time, may become substantially difficult to connect with the reason for activation.

Best practices calls for discipline in the use of BWCs, supervisor verifications, evidence person verifications in terms of proper cataloging, and a handful of random audits per year from management. Policy would drive this process and, if followed, serves as a solid safety net to preserving the integrity of the platform.

'911' Dispatch Center

The police department and the sheriff's office have a long-standing written agreement that affords the police department with county dispatching services and the sheriff's office with city services. This assessment did not reveal any information or complaints tending to support a deeper assessment of this arrangement. The center has a modern, well-known dispatching and records management system platform: Motorola Solutions - Spillman Flex.

I'll take a moment here and give a shout-out to the Public Safety Dispatchers. They should be honored, respected, and supported to the same level as that of the sworn staff. Saying their job is difficult is an understatement. Further, recognize that they too feel the job-related tension and trauma from calls for service. Many Dispatch Centers face the same types of ongoing staffing challenges and hits to morale that sworn do, yet are too often ignored in my view.

Recruitment Strategies and Over-hire

Once two new officers are hired to fill the vacancies and successfully complete the field training program, this certainly will provide a sense of relief and stability in the department. However, at that point, the chief and the city should not rest easy or on its laurels.

Turn-over is normal therefore, predictable. As such, a police agency must have an effective and modern recruitment strategy. Failure to have such a plan causes unnecessary problems. For instance, low recruitment numbers, delays in hiring, excessive overtime to cover the vacant positions, potential job burnout and related issues, low morale, and a decrease in the level of service.

It took over two-months before advertising began to fill the aforementioned vacant police officer positions. Keep in mind that there were pre-notices of separation too. The process and length of time to hire an already experienced officer is arduous to say the least. Roughly speaking, once a candidate has been selected from the recruitment phase (i.e. advertising and pre-screening), it can easily take two months to complete the required pre-employment background process, medical, psychological testing, and get started. Should the applicant pass this phase, add weeks to months of field training before the applicant actually fills the vacant position. Non-academy hires take even longer. Not all hires pass the process or probationary period, which results in a repeat of the above, long process.

An effective recruitment strategy starts before a vacancy actually occurs

Police officers leave naturally. Some retire while others simply want to try something new. Police officers have professional goals and can wind up leaving to chase them in other agencies. Officers may have to move to follow a spouse whose job relocated while others are forced to medical out due to an illness or injury. There are occasions where an officer is just not the right fit in the organization (or vice versa) but without unwanted behavior or misconduct acting as the trigger. It could be a case of an officer becoming disgruntled over not getting promoted or after being disciplined. Adding mandated training, vacations, sick-time, and family leave to the mix highlights the need to fully examine the authorized number of positions. At times, a deployment number seems reasonable until an agency sees it in action and discovers the frequency of operating below preferred staffing levels and consequences thereof.

The Yerington Police Department has not had a sense of upward mobility or true advancement for a very long time. This setting is not appealing to many, which impacts recruitment and retention

Bottom line here: there are a number of reasons why officers move and shift vacancies occur. Instead of fighting it and perhaps passing blame, it's better to embrace the reality and have a plan in place to keep the organization moving forward with full-staffing. The effective, modern recruitment strategy (aka: Fast-track) key points are:

- o Robust social media platform
- o Inviting and easy to navigate department website
- Continuous recruitment (no end dates) tab easy online application directly to the police department (skip HR)
- Near immediate response to pre-screen potential applicants plus continual support for those who look promising
- o A simple but clean ad in a major law enforcement publication
- o Sponsor local talent
- o Non-sworn community service officers to police officers
- Focused, accelerated pre-employment background process
- Over-hire (see below)

Over-hiring is difficult to swallow from a budget standpoint. This is because the typical and immediate thought is confined to just the cost of having an "extra" person around but without considering the rest of the story. Over-hiring comes in two ways: First, simply a policy edit, should existing policy prohibit this practice, that allows a new hire to occur before a separating employee actually leaves. Vacancy dates can be projected. Consider someone who is reaching retirement age. Many give a one-year notice or at least a month or so. Officers typically give notice when they have entered the pre-employment background check in another agency. This means at least a month or more before the actual exit date. A nimble organization sees the notice of pending separation as a green light to begin moving potential applicants deeper into the hiring process. An ideal setting would be to hire the new employee before the actual vacancy occurs. This is especially important for job positions that only have one person like Reception, Records, Evidence Tech, or chief. Wouldn't the new hire benefit greatly from a few days or a week of orientation and training from the employee who's leaving? Should this not be a possibility, the goal is to minimize the time a position is vacant.

The budget folks see a vacancy as a financial bonus realized by temporary salary savings and as such, can linger on the hiring process; the Human Resources folks advocate a hiring process that is often slow and unfortunately not relevant for law enforcement; meanwhile, the police agency and the community feel the discomfort from resources that are below the minimum. The competing interests illustrated herein accidently cause conflict, which needs to be eliminated for the sake of public safety

Second, an actual over-hire (i.e. one above minimum deployment) standard in my experience was never an "extra" person but in fact, was the safety net that prevented a dangerous below minimum deployment and excessive over-time costs. Consider the lengthy list of reasons shift vacancies occur naturally, the potential number of days, and how long it takes just to get one new officer on the books through training. This demonstrates a one-over minimum deployment strategy is sound. Subordinate to the officer safety element, the overall cost of the over-hire is actually softened by the reduction in over-time costs associated with trying to fill shift vacancies. There are also relevant, but difficult to quantify exactly, consequences resulting from an organization operating too long outside of the norm or preferred model.

Discussion

Absent a pending priority call-for-service (CFS), failure occurs when an Officer leaves the station to begin the shift without first learning about what had occurred the previous shift(s) and what has not been resolved or closed satisfactorily. Notice here that on a 12-hour work schedule, an Officer's days off span either three or four days. This creates a tremendous gap that requires a longer briefing to get caught up on any lingering and Officer Safety issues.

The community does not, and should not, accept the excuses that resolving their CFS has been delayed due to the department schedule. To illustrate, here is a common setting: an Officer responds to a CFS but is unable to bring the issue to a close by the end of shift. The next Officer comes on shift and either has no clue of the unresolved CFS or does, but pushes the needed follow up to the initiating Officer's next shift. Well, this could be 12-hours later or, worse, three or four days later if the initiating Officer has gone on days off.

Lingering issues are not helpful to anyone except perhaps the crooks. The brunt of the frustration citizens express are unfortunately often directed to the Dispatcher Center and Reception, which do not have control over the Officer assigned to the CFS

While it is much easier to track and hold accountable one officer attached to a CFS from beginning to end, the reality is that a number of problems simply cannot be resolved in a few minutes. This illustrates the need for a meaningful roll call to help ensure continuous momentum toward solving leading issues. The value of field sergeants that was demonstrated earlier in this report might have popped into your mind at this point. They are charged with the responsibility of driving the roll calls and ensuring steady problem solving.

Although patrolling – being visible – causes civilians to feel a sense of safety and security, aimlessly driving around or parking to monitor an area without a data-driven purpose undermines the potential of solving the leading community concerns. The leading concerns are realized through statistics and other qualifying information. They must be kept at the forefront of the deployment strategies until measurable levels of success are achieved. Occasionally an officer asserts he's done his job simply by being visible. This is a cop-out (no pun intended), which would require leadership intervention to stop the lackluster, unwanted behavior.

Officers here are allowed to conduct follow up after a CFS, which is a good way to resolve issues fast and also develop skill sets. Necessary follow up beyond the patrol level heads to the Investigator. This position should also be well informed, purpose or data driven, and be able at moment's notice to illustrate caseload, status of each, and case closure details. The investigator ideally would be held accountable to a sergeant, the duo would be self-motivated, and also participate in crime control meetings chaired by the chief.

A portion of the statistical data herein includes crime clearance rates. This simply demonstrates the number or percentage of reported crimes that were actually solved. Per the FBI and various other sources, the nationwide clearance rate for violent crimes has a range of about 28%-54% while theft and property crimes range from about 12%-15%. Caution should be used on drawing a conclusion based exclusively on any given clearance rate/percentage indicated below. For instance, there were reported rapes in 2018 – 2020 with zero clearance rates. Although this could indicate substandard police work, it could also indicate a data entry error, uncooperative victims, or an unknown suspect scenario. To help ensure solid case management practices and favorable clearance rates, frequent status updates must be provided especially on serial and violent crimes. It'd be wise for the department to revisit and audit unsolved, major cases.

Without a chain-of-command and proper oversight through crime control meetings, case management and clearance rates will suffer

The following statistical information was difficult to obtain from the police department. The police department is behind on statistical data input. The primary drivers for this challenge appear to fall under the aforementioned gaps in the organizational chart, support, and training. Administrative Services and all Officers must have at their fingertips access to statistics, reports, accountability measures, etc. to assist them with their work.

Adding to the challenge, in the beginning of 2021, the voluntary share information process for the Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI) experienced an upgrade. The long-standing Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) Program was replaced by the National Incident-Based Reporting System (NIBRS). Per the FBI's website:

Implemented to improve the overall quality of crime data collected by law enforcement, NIBRS captures details on each single crime incident—as well as on separate offenses within the same incident—including information on victims, known offenders, relationships between victims and offenders, arrestees, and property involved in crimes.

As recommended by professional law enforcement organizations, the FBI has made nationwide implementation of NIBRS a top priority because NIBRS can provide more useful statistics to promote constructive discussion, measured planning, and informed policing.

Moving to NIBRS was not an easy task and not all law enforcement agencies in the nation have completed the transition. Some may never. The FBI indicated that technology and [extra] staff would be required to make the transition to the expanded system. Below, however, are data sections I was able to obtain:

Open, Pending, or Unfinished Case Reports

Vehicle Theft:

As of the first week of October, the chief had about twenty reports for review in his electronic in-box and about three of them on his desk under active review. His workday involves "putting out fires" first which, in this instance, would involve prioritizing reports ready for review. Incustody reports come first as they are time-sensitive while the non-emergency or relatively low priority reports can wait. The daily number for review would ebb and flow.

The research indicated some concern about the department having too many "open" cases - the backlog from the patrol officers and the chief's review process. A number of different sources were used in the attempt to simply identify the number of open reports for 2022 and 2023. This was a difficult task and the ideal audit report was not obtained.

A Summary Report of Pending cases up to Oct. 16, 2023, amounted to about 121 of the 314 cases taken. For 2022, there were 87 of 566 cases taken. These numbers are red flags but are not completely reliable either.

The records management system (RMS) offers an enormous number of report types that could be used for auditing purposes. However, the challenge presented is peeling back the dozens of layers to determine with certainty the number of officer reports that were truly open, pending, or unfinished (i.e. neglected) as opposed to data error or software preference. For instance, randomly checking cases listed as pending revealed case numbers given to calls for service that did not require one, which skewed the audit reports. Further, Alarm Calls fall under the Offense code and a case number is automatically generated for the possible false alarm billing. These eventually can be cleared but this takes a records person who has the time to do so. This year alone, the audit report indicates 35 open cases spread amongst various officers yet they are not responsible for this administrative function. The audit summaries are an A-to-Z format under Offense types; it would take many weeks to open and review each potential pending case to verify.

Out of the numerous audit reports reviewed, however, I can safely assume that three common problems exist: The "garbage in, garbage-out" (GIGO) aspect, procrastination, and lack of personnel to monitor and verify.

The police should be policing, not wasting their time with non-police work such as inputting, data entry, double-checking, auditing, etc. The reality, however, is that some of this must occur in this day and age due to the introduction of software, electronic devices, and public demand. Besides basic procrastination on tasks, when a piece of modern technology is not fast, reliable, and user-friendly, failure in the data collection and accuracy occurs. Further, when no one is supervising the enormous amount of data inflow to verify, edit, catalog appropriately, etc., failure occurs.

The research revealed the current report-writing module does not have an auto-reminder of unfinished reports, which sends emails to officers, their supervisors, and records. This aids in quickly correcting data errors and procrastination. Requests to the vendor have been made to add that feature, which would remedy a portion of this discussion area. Time will tell if the vendor can do so without an enormous programming cost.

The research confirmed that there are necessary levels of access into what is considered the highly confidential law enforcement database. This presents a roadblock of sorts for the department. The chief seems to have a high level, as he should. But his Administrative Services staffer lacks a level that if given, would be helpful with the issues discussed in this section.

Audit Reports can either be an ally or the enemy - it's your choice

There may be an internal flowchart of sorts and a directive not mentioned to me that addresses unfinished reports and tracking thereof. Regardless, the department must reach a point of discipline where the internal open/pending case audit reports are very much in its favor. Accomplish this by ensuring reports are always completed as early as reasonably possible and follow up daily to confirm the audit reports reflect the same. It would be ideal for the Administrative Services staffer to become very familiar with this process and help ensure that no reports fall through the cracks.

Illg. Employee Sentiments (one-on-ones)

Recommendations

- o Eliminate the Officer Daily Log process
- Correct the POOR and NONE ratings
- o Establish a Training Plan
- Enhance the GOOD rating related to public support
- Reset and convey clear operational expectations
- o Mitigate the sense of micromanagement and undermining
- Correct the gaps in the Organizational Chart to include a reset of the Investigator Special Assignment
- New police department building
- Website and social media enhance
- o Employee recognition, commendation program

Discussion

The format was intentionally broad in an attempt to engage a number of data sources and in particular, identify those that stood out one way or the other. All police department employees participated. I met with previous employees as well for additional data points. The length of the individual conversations ranged from about 3 to 7 hours.

SWOT Analysis

Strengths

High: Camaraderie. Teamwork much better than before. Community trust. Equipment. Vehicles.

Mid: Solving crime.

Low / Isolated: No strengths. Flexible schedule.

Observations: The message conveyed was that there was a rough patch a year or so ago that was attributed to various types of internal employee conflict but some improvement occurred. A sense of optimism was expressed. Confidence in the city manager's fiscal management ability and support was expressed.

Weakness High: Drama in the past, but still lingering. Morale weak but better now. Chief falling behind, but chief is also the sergeant and the lieutenant. Chief being undermined or micromanaged by one or more city councilmembers. Daily log. PD building. Mid: Short-handed. Down two officers plus the vacant sergeant and lieutenant positions. Low / Isolated: Lack of advanced training. Run out of supplies. The hybrid investigator / supervisor position description confusing, not working well. Employee(s) not carrying own weight. No evaluations or physicals. Poor leadership. Chief only able to put out fires. Policy is old. Observations: 100% feel an obvious obstacle to achieving the best operational results is the lack of a supervisor or middle manager to assist the chief with daily tasks - providing the chief will actually let go of non-chief tasks. Opportunities High: Outreach. Social Media. Grants. Mid: None Low / Isolated: Add more officers for officer safety reasons. More visible. Foot patrol. Observation(s): Low staffing prevents pursuing normal opportunities. Threats High: No police supervisor or middle manager. One or more city councilmembers undermining and micromanaging the chief; allowing disgruntled employees to complain without basis, "manager shopping", onesided. Optics. Animosity. Conflict of interest. Middle: Nation-wide defund the police movement and voter-approved decriminalization are disappointing and frustrating. Low / Isolated: Not having a fully functioning K9 unit. Low staffing. Leadership.

Observations: Some of the comments were well-reasoned such as: if the chief is truly being micromanaged and/or undermined who then is actually at fault should something fail? Give the chief reasonable expectations and hold him accountable should he fail. Next, if the level of outward attention from one or more city councilmembers against the police department is not a conflict of interest or an ethical dilemma, it certainly feels like it is.

Further Discussion

The chief should recognize where his ratings are either higher or lower than the prominent ratings presented. Doing so may reveal a leader-follower organizational disconnect. Bringing them to light is a step toward better communication and problem solving.

A healthy organization would self-score higher than "good" on number 17 (Public Support). One seasoned member said he actually had no idea therefore, couldn't give a rating. Solid work plus modern outreach to include a robust social media platform naturally enhances public support. This topic is further discussed elsewhere in this report.

The POOR rating on numbers 10 (Building) and 31 (Employee Evaluations) are discussed elsewhere in this report.

Number 8 (Vehicles) overwhelmingly received a "Great" rating and with that came sincere appreciation and thanks expressed toward the city management team for approving them.

Open-ended Questions

1. What primary changes would make the department better overall?

Ending the requirement of completing a manual activity log sheet and move to software that captures data was mentioned frequently during this survey. A new police department building, related safety/security features, and normal creature comforts was mentioned as a top need. Shoring up the Command Staff was felt as a critical need to let the chief be a chief while also ensuring normal operational standards are met. Both Advanced Officer training – not barely making the minimum for POST - and software user training were very important. The position of Training Manager was expressed as important along with better mapping for the MDT's.

2. Are you experiencing any uncomfortable interference from inside the police department, outside, from a member of the public, an organization, or other agencies?

A slight level of micromanaging internally but to a greater extent externally was expressed. The common and occasional personality differences among co-workers was mentioned. Last, employees talked about a lack of time and personnel to keep up with basic demands.

3. What do you like most about the job?

Employees are attracted to the freedom patrol provides, solving the crime puzzles, seeing what others do not see, helping people, teamwork, generally enjoying the people they work with, and the opportunity on occasion to be present at community events.

4. What do you like least about the job?

Grumpy co-workers, the previous drama, and arm-chair quarterbacking. Segments of the Field Training Officer (FTO) program were not reasonable. Some of the paperwork and employee insurance costs can be frustrating. Last, some calls for service are truly sad and remain in memory.

5. Career goal?

Some spoke of just hoping to make it to retirement safely while ensuring the boss remains happy. Others spoke of hoping to promote to some level such as: SWAT, K9, range master, FTO, SRO, investigator, sergeant, lieutenant, and academy training officer.

Note: had a quality sergeant or lieutenant been in place for a number of years, you'd likely see "chief" listed above too.

6. Level of formal education?

All graduated from High School and have some level of college work completed.

7. Verbal, written commendations or service medals?

All related this function doesn't occur in the department.

8. Highlight of career?

The answers mainly fell into the ability in Yerington to build positive relationships, consistently being able to help co-workers, the level of accomplishment felt after passing the field training program, truly enjoying the profession, and with a sprinkling of investigative achievements.

IV Community Public Safety Survey

Recommendations

- o Take the survey results seriously
- Shore-up the question related to leadership
- Work on reducing the number of "not sure" responses
- Routinely push out Police Activity updates, general statistics, and Public Service Announcements
- o Recognize the want of Proactive work vs Reactive
- Drug and alcohol related crimes dominated public perception followed by Domestic Violence and theft related crimes – tackle this area and publicize the results
- Driving under the influence of drugs/alcohol, speeding, and school zone violations dominated vehicle code enforcement wants followed by child restraint and excessive noise violations – tackle these areas and publicize the results
- Abatements of abandoned vehicles and unsightly, distressed, and unsafe properties plus noise-related issues dominated Muni-code wants- tackle these areas and publicize the results
- Recognize that excessive noise concerns fell into two different categories and that citizens are passionate about that topic- tackle this area and publicize the results
- Engage the dialog about the police vs non-sworn responses to abatements and other non-criminal type calls-for-service

Discussion

The following survey was posted on the City's website and Facebook page, which was shared a number of times. I canvassed the general city area, visiting a number of locations to introduce the survey request. I reached out to Rotary and the Chamber of Commerce. Both service organizations shared the survey request with their membership. I also shared the survey request at a Lyon County Citizens' Advisory Board meeting. Along the way, I received unsolicited support and praise for police officers generally and the Yerington Police Department. One person who would fall into the category of a professional in a large organization followed up by providing a written commendation for Chief Wagner. The commendation asserted that despite the department suffering from inadequate funding and understaffing for many years now, it still has managed to be helpful.

I received 23 completed surveys. Low participation is common therefore, was expected. Nonetheless, each survey received has value. You will find below the questions and selections from which participants could choose. Inserted next to each selection reveals the frequency, 0 – 23. Also, some participants wrote comments, which are insightful and included:

Criminal Activity – Public Perception

What do you feel are criminal acts that frequently occur in Yerington? Select all that apply, please.

- Burglary (i.e. breaking or entering into a home or business) = 8

- Skateboarding = 1
- Loitering = 3
- Noise complaints = 6

Three participants questioned the police getting involved in the abatement of abandoned vehicles and unsightly or distressed properties. They felt this should be handled by public works. It is true that not all police agencies have sworn officers engaging in abatements, especially related to property. Also, there is a fairly recent trend that aims to stop the police from engaging in non-criminal types of work.

One participant related a trash problem located at Cramer's on Bridge. St.

V. Training and Nevada Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training (POST) Compliance

Recommendations

- o Officers attend advanced and specialized training at Regional Training Centers or the like
- o Yearly support for non-sworn staff
- o Create a Training Plan

Discussion

Va – Training

Employee input indicated a lack of training. Whether it did or not, a crucial part of running a law enforcement agency involves ensuring a steady flow of related training for all officers and non-sworn staff. There are certain skills that are considered perishable. Meaning, without ongoing training, the skills diminish. Perishable skills include Firearms, Arrest and Control (aka: defensive tactics), less-lethal tools, and Emergency Vehicle Operations (aka: EVOC). There are a host of other critical, mandated, and insightful courses listed in various approved State of Nevada sources.

Per the Nevada POST:

Law enforcement professionals play an important role in maintaining the security that is so essential to our society; and, effective training is crucial to their success. The Commission on Peace Officer Standards and Training is dedicated to Nevada's Peace Officers supporting the need for training to ensure that the State of Nevada provides a capable and skilled workforce. In furtherance of this goal, POST is devoted to providing information about technical and specialized training courses to meet the needs of the ever-changing problems that confront law enforcement officers in their daily activities.

Per the Nevada Administrative Code (NAC), requirements for officers to maintain their certifications are below. Notice that the NAC indicates "minimum level of proficiency," which will be addressed further down in this section:

- o Demonstrate biannually a minimum level of proficiency in the use of assigned firearms
- Demonstrate annually a minimum level of proficiency in the use of assigned impact weapons, chemical weapons, electronic incapacitating devices, and other less-lethal weapons
- Demonstrate annually a minimum level of proficiency in arrest and control tactics, handcuffing, self-defense, and weapon retention
- Demonstrate annually a minimum level of proficiency in the use of carotid restraint or lateral vascular neck restraint should the agency authorize such techniques
- Complete annually not less that twelve (12) hours of continuing education in the following subjects:
 - 1) Racial profiling
 - 2) Mental health
 - 3) The well-being of officers
 - 4) Implicit bias recognition
 - 5) De-escalation
 - 6) Human trafficking
 - 7) Firearms

The police department, its employees, and the budget process would benefit greatly with the development of a long-term, visual Training Plan. To create one, list all of the perishable skills and mandated courses, and identify the frequency each one is required per law. From the information above, here's an example:

- o Firearms (2x per year)
- Less-lethal and specialty tools (1x per year)
- Arrest and Control Defensive Tactics (1x per year)
- Carotid restraint, if applicable (1x per year)
- Racial Profiling (1x per year)
- Mental Health (1x per year)
- Officer well-being (1x per year)
- Implicit bias (1x per year)
- o De-escalation (1x per year)
- o Human trafficking (1x per year)
- Legal updates (1x per year)
- o Emergency Vehicle Operation Course (EVOC) (1x every other year)
- First Aid (1x every other year)

Commit to the list, insert into the multi-year deployment schedule, and lay out in advance the budget implications for Finance.

Note: it appears POST dropped the EVOC requirement a few years ago and replaced it with an emerging training trend. It appears, however, the State requires a defensive driving course every four-years for employees who drive State vehicles. Law enforcement is an exception providing they participate in EVOC. Whatever the gap may be, I strongly recommend EVOC every two-years for officers. The Nevada Highway Patrol might be the best resource for this training. I feel behind the wheel training is better than the simulators.

To assist the entry level officers better, list all of the courses they ought to have after the academy within two-years to help ensure success. Think of the common exposure at the patrol level here, for instance:

- o Basic Traffic Collision Investigations
- Interview and Interrogation field contacts
- o DUI / Drug recognition courses
- o Intoxilyzer
- o Domestic Violence response for patrol
- Child Abuse response for patrol
- Death investigation response for patrol

Commit to the list, insert into the multi-year deployment schedule, and lay out in advance the budget implications for Finance.

Next, think of Advanced and Professional Development courses for the more seasoned officers. For instance:

- o Leadership
- Active threats
- Street survival
- Crime scene management
- Advanced field investigations
- o Search Warrants
- Field Training Officer (FTO)
 - a) I advocate for all officers after a couple of years of quality service to complete the FTO course. This is a "thinking outside of the box" moment. The FTO course is actually a leadership course. Therefore, whether or not an officer is used much as an FTO, he/she and the agency benefits from the legal and liability portions presented from the curriculum. Educating officers is minimizing risk.

Commit to the list, insert into the multi-year deployment schedule, and lay out in advance the budget implications for Finance.

Do not forget about the non-sworn staff. In YPD's case:

- Records Management Software user conference (1x per year)
- Records Management Retention (1x every other year)
- o Occasional customer service, conflict resolution, types of courses

Once again, commit to the list, insert into the multi-year deployment schedule, and lay out in advance the budget implications for Finance.

In-house training has its place. I would lean, however, toward reducing this type of training in lieu of certified training offered at Regional Training Centers, conferences, and offered by well-known vendors. The short answers as to why fall under the umbrella of workplace conflict avoidance, diversification of training – silo avoidance, and depth of expertise to include should the city be named as a defendant following an accident, use-of-force, or critical event.

The current internet-based training platform offered at the police department is solid. This type of training, however, should be used to fill small gaps, if any, and to augment standards but not as a crutch or the primary means of receiving the bulk of certified training. See below under Profile section for additional information.

The theme to recognize here falls under planning, budgeting, and quality support for all members of the police department.

Vb - POST Audits and Officer Profile Reports

A review of the past two POST Compliance Audit reports:

Results from the October 2019 audit revealed one non-compliant area out of the five applicable. The non-compliant area was a lack of training on impact, chemical, electronic incapacitating devices, and other less-lethal tools. This was remedied the following month therefore, the agency moved into compliance.

This particular audit also mentioned that the NAC mandatory training was conducted in-house.

Results from the February 2022 audit revealed the two pre-employment background investigations of new hires were compliant with regulations and also that NAC mandatory training was conducted in-house. The five applicable audit sections were all compliant.

Note: The research revealed one non-department source that asserted the agency was not in POST compliance. The data suggests otherwise.

Passing the POST compliance audit is not necessarily something to celebrate. Recall above that the threshold to reach is a "minimum level of proficiency," which could mean barely making the cut for some. This is not a criticism of POST but rather, just the logical place for the governing body to draw the line in the sand. There is no question in my mind that POST, experts, insurance companies, etc. would all agree that working hard to exceed the baseline is smart. Communities expect a high-level of proficiency and training is a primary tool on how to achieve that.

POST maintains training records providing completed courses were actually POST certified. Law Enforcement agencies have online access and can generate reports on their current officers. A "Profile Report" reveals a host of information.

A review of the Profiles of current officers revealed what was mentioned above regarding the type of training received: The bulk were very short, in-house training sessions. Over the past three-years, only two officers received an advanced course of instruction, which were 40-plus hours in length.

The Administrative Services employee provided the Profiles mentioned above and also directed me to training binders she has maintained for years. The binders are a reflection and hard copies of the trainings listed in the employee Profiles. The binders were neat, organized, and complete.

VI Performance Appraisals (aka: Employee Evaluations) and Recognition

Recommendations

- Yearly Pre-evaluation form Employee Input
- Yearly evaluations
- o Recognition

Discussion

The basic, classic failures of the employee evaluation process are failing to complete them ontime or creating a halo effect. The potential consequences to organizations when failing to provide evaluations or submitting poorly written versions runs deep and is certainly not a secret. The halo effect is essentially an overly glowing report that also lacks the discussion area about professional growth. Besides these potentials, supervisors simply find yearly evaluations a pain and some struggle with the narrative.

I reviewed the Pool Pact HR supplied Performance Appraisal the police department uses. It is fine but I suggest the following for better results.

An employee pre-evaluation form is effective, handy, and saves time. A consensus can be established before the supervisor actually begins the evaluation narrative. This is because employees know their strengths and weaknesses, needs, and what's already in their personnel file (i.e. sustained complaints and commendations). Thus, a pre-evaluation form that causes the employee to reflect on the evaluation period, provide details, and dialog with the supervisor serves as a good reminder of what the agency is all about. Providing a fair level of thoroughness in completing the form, the supervisor then chats with the employee to build on the details provided. This is the type of leader-follower dialog we want and what easily is transferred into the evaluation form itself.

Performance Evaluations have a bad rap with some asserting they are useless. Take charge and refuse to fall into that trap. Make the process one of the most important pieces in the organization in terms of employee support and development.

There are, of course, the occasional stubborn, difficult, or consistently oppositional employees who push back on the evaluation process. Their immediate supervisor works through this just like any other episode where a subordinate needs a little encouragement or direction.

The pre-evaluation form is a reflection and a reminder of the agency's Mission, Core Values, and Motto. It also serves as a platform of recognition and accountability, as mentioned above. See the sample below. Visualize how completing it unfolds and the subsequent value it provides to the employee, the rater, and the organization:

Example

Yerington Police Department Pre-Evaluation Form

The Mission of the Yerington Police Department is (insert). Its Core Values are (insert - example: Courage, Ethics, and Service). Our Motto is (insert).

- 1. Please give some examples of how you have demonstrated the department's Mission Statement, Core Values, and Motto during this rating period:
- 2. Please provide brief details of all verbal compliments and written commendations received during this rating period:
- 3. Please provide brief details on any counseling memos and sustained complaints received during this rating period:
- 4. What was the highlight of this rating period?
- 5. What was the most significant or troubling challenge during this rating period internally, externally, or both?
- 6. What types of calls for service are the most difficult for you to navigate, why, and how can the police department help you with this?
- 7. Briefly identify all formal education and work-related training completed during this rating period:

8. What short and long-term goals are you considering?

The immediate supervisor meets with the employee, discusses and builds on the details, and then transfers the valuable information into the Performance Evaluation. The completed pre-eval form is attached. A copy is provided to the officer after signatures and the original retained in the personnel file.

Recognition

As illustrated above, recognition should find its way into the evaluation process. This is, however, just one piece of a recognition program. The employee input section indicated the department does not engage in recognition nor has Service Medals.

Providing the copy of the Yerington Police Department's Policy Manual given to me is the most current version, there is a General Order, No. 2-19, dated February, 15, 2002, titled Positive Comments and Awards. This policy provides the procedures and criteria for both commendations and medals. This policy is old but right on point and needs to be followed.

VII. Mission Statement, Motto, and Core Values

Recommendations

- o Develop a new Mission Statement, Motto, and create a set of Core Values
- o Let the community drive this project

Discussion

The following ten-plus-year-old combo Motto and Mission Statement is framed and hanging on a wall inside the police department:

The Mission of the Yerington Police Department

As a member of the Yerington Police Department, I commit to provide and maintain the highest quality of service, provide a safe and secure environment, and persevere to excel in my profession. I will seek to develop and maintain trust from the citizens through whom my effort is measured. My partnership with the community will be based on respect, pride, honor, courage and dignity. My ethical standards will not be compromised. My personal sacrifices will transform these goals into reality and build a strong foundation for our future.

Motto

Our Community, Our Pride

The Mission Statement above reads more like the law enforcement code of ethics and canons. A Mission Statement instead should be concise and strive to reflect why the police department exists – its purpose for being, reassuring, and motivating.

To help ensure a responsive police leader-police staff-community connection, the police department ought to develop a new Mission Statement and Motto plus a set of Core Values

Some roll their eyes on this topic. They complain that Mission Statements and the like are just fluff and almost immediately forgotten. Although that is the case in some instances, who let that happen? The leadership, right? An organization either takes this process seriously or it does not. Recall the section on Performance Appraisals, the pre-eval portion, that keeps these purpose and value statements alive.

Reach out to the community to assist with this worthy project. After all, should not those with whom the police department serve have say on this topic? In terms of branding (i.e. creating your department's distinct identity), public input on projects like this helps drive the data used to develop the department's responsive messaging platform.

The chief could introduce the project, goal, parameters, and move the details to various groups to see what develops. Final versions could be presented and move to a community vote.

VIII. Fact Check

VIIIa: Assertion no. 1: Permission from the chief is required before issuing citations, taking enforcement action, and making arrests.

This notion is FALSE – Unanimous that this was not the case. Unfortunately, the assertion was made and then perpetuated by one or more individuals. There is a list of crime or incident types that require a courtesy notification to the chief. Examples given were a violent crime that had occurred, a death, sexual assaults, a pursuit that by law requires a supervisor's notification, a use-of-force, or an event that would cause significant community or media concern.

I reviewed the list in policy, which predates the current chief, and it is sound. Officers said the chief ought to know so he can offer technical assistance when needed and be able to intelligently address the public. No one argued otherwise. Had this occurred, they would have received a lesson on followership, leadership, common sense, and the general responsibilities of a police department.

The bulk of the officers related the chief is available 24/7 as a sounding board, for technical advice, and even responds in the middle of the night when requested, which has been much appreciated. It was pointed out that officers frequently are on patrol alone. They do not have a partner or a field supervisor who would act as the second or "cover" officer on traffic stops and calls for service that normally dictate two. Deputies, however, have been very helpful. The result of this current low deployment number is the chief receiving phone calls for assistance and responding when needed.

What triggered this assertion anyway? There are a number of likely potentials: officers call the chief for advice and notifications instead of a sergeant. Simply put, this dynamic rubs some people the wrong way while others not close to the police department might perceive that a chief getting so involved must be a case of micromanagement. These triggered the criticism and the allegation of "micromanager" which, in my view, is perhaps the most over-used flaming arrow shot by the misinformed, the anti-leader, anti-rule, and disgruntled groups.

Although perfectly legal, within policy, and needed since the chief is the only supervisor, this is not normal or a best practice. It feels odd too. It can be intimidating for the officers just because of the rank. Also, some officers have large egos, cavalier behavior, and resentfulness, which comes into play. Sometimes there are competitions of sorts between neighboring police departments or the sheriff's office that on a small scale becomes disruptive. There are also different tactics, policies, and preferences between agencies that draw out ire. Some law enforcement officers are cautious, methodical, and by the book, which is not wrong, but drives the hyperactive, almost cutting-corners types of officers nuts. There are those who think they have it all figured out and those who thought they had it all figured out until they got uncomfortably squeezed in court, lost a case or a piece of evidence, got disciplined or sued. There are multiple ways to investigate and catch a crook, which is what drives the occasional clashes over preferences and thus, the chatter.

Here are two examples to better illustrate my points on this dynamic:

I was a young officer attending my first union meeting. I was shocked at what I heard. There were a couple of co-workers berating the then-chief, behind his back of course. The assertions were an attempt to temper by way of union vote the chief's occasional enforcement action. They accused the chief of being too old (he was under 50 and with a stellar career) and disrupting their normal shift when suddenly he'd radio in an in-progress crime or that he was making a traffic stop. They complained a chief had no business getting involved in actual police work and should stay tethered to his desk. The criticisms were bogus. But the message traveled and devolved to assertions like "micromanager", which was very far from the truth and just a flaming arrow for deflection. I learned later about the small percentage of lazy, disgruntled, jealous, or just ego-driven BS-ing types of co-workers. Was it a bit uncomfortable, however, when the chief spoke on the radio or showed up on one of my traffic stops? Yes! That's simply because of his rank and the fear about accidently screwing up in front of him. It's bad enough making a mistake in front of a sergeant but maybe ten-fold in front of the chief. But at the end of the day, he was a great cop, very helpful, and his character was top notch.

The next example has to do with tactics. I used to work where officers from a neighboring police department were prohibited from assisting my police officers with high-risk, felony vehicle traffic stops. These types of stops involve pointing duty firearms in the direction of the suspect vehicle and occupants while carefully extracting each one from the vehicle. Why the conflict between the agencies? We were proficient with one popular and approved method while the neighboring agency was proficient with a different popular and approved method. The two methods were diametrically different – not compatible – and officers were only trained on their respective agency preference. This caused banter and gossip for a period of time.

The bottom line in this segment is that the chief sets the tone, direction, and expectations in his agency. It is not a democracy. Others trying to influence this could be a case of the tail trying to wag the dog. It does not matter if someone from another agency has a different preference, style, tactics, or level of tolerance. Providing the chief's directions are legal and within policy, officers shall follow his lead or be subject to progressive discipline. Police work is a serious business and this is how it works. No exceptions! Recall above where Whittenburg related that there is only one Mission in a police department, no self-defined work is allowed, and that standards are designed to be met.

In order for the chief to be successful, the city manager and city councilmembers must recognize the role of the chief and let that play out. There are established standards and a job description for chiefs, which can also serve as the yardstick for accountability. Tinkering, editing, interfering, or undermining the established role of the chief creates unnecessary drama.

One way a chief proves the department's worth is through the delivery of steady streams of public information

VIIIb: Assertion no. 2: Citizen Arrest forms are required before officers can make arrests.

This notion is also FALSE. Unanimous this was not the case. The form is only used per law when the misdemeanor crime was not committed in the officer's presence. Or, importantly, as a strategy on questionable cases where a signature from a complaining party would be ideal to test their commitment and potentially reduce department exposure. The deployment of Body Worn Cameras (BWC) has provided some remedy but is not as impactful as pen-to-paper in some cases.

IX. Vehicle Fleet

Recommendation None

Discussion

The city has purchased vehicles locally. The recent purchases for police vehicles (Chevy Tahoe's) were not made locally but this is not uncommon. Generally, police agencies seek dealerships that have the inventory and state bid pricing. Not all dealerships participate but that can change from year to year. A Chevy Tahoe is a solid choice for a police vehicle.

The police department has been frugal with vehicle purchases. There are specific police vehicle platforms offered that cost much more. A review of the upfitting costs (i.e. emergency lights, siren, radio, etc.) were consistent with industry standards.

In terms of maintenance for the new Tahoe's, there has been one repair needed. It was completed at the local Chevy dealership and under a recall notice. Oil changes and tire repair/replacements are completed locally. The department shops locally at hardware and auto parts stores for various needs.

X. Grant funding

Recommendations

- Apply for the Bulletproof Vest Program (BVP) grant
- Seek a multi-year grant for School Resource Officer (SRO)
- o Seek a grant for Body Worn Camera assistance
- o Seek a grant for a Property and Evidence person
- o Scrutinize grant announcements
- Monitor Hudbay Mining progress

Discussion

Xa BVP

A records check revealed the Yerington Police Department does not participate in the bulletproof vest reimbursement program offered by the U.S. Department of Justice – Office of Justice Programs - Patrick Leahy Bulletproof Vest Partnership | Overview | Office of Justice Programs (oip.gov):

"Created by the Bulletproof Vest Partnership Grant Act of 1998, the Patrick Leahy Bulletproof Vest Partnership (BVP) Program, administered by the Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA), reimburses states, units of local government, and federally recognized Indian tribes for up to 50 percent of the cost of body armor vests purchased for law enforcement officers."

New applicants must create an account in SAM - the System for Award Management. Do so well before the next open application period as it takes time to be accepted and receive the necessary credentials to apply. Afterwards, the grant funding is fairly easy to obtain. There are no strings attached.

It is recommended that vests be replaced after five-years of use. This is due to advances in technology and to ensure ongoing, proper fit rather than a sudden expiration date scenario. The roughly 50 percent reimbursement softens the upfront costs. Start now on creating a current, in-house vest inventory that includes serial numbers and wearers to assist you later. Follow the website to ensure seeing the open application period announcement. Apply for one or two vests even if no current vests will reach the five-year mark during the funding period. This is smart since employee turn-over occurs, funding cannot be applied retroactively, and the life-span of unused funds has been up to two-years.

Once awarded, the agency's designated program administrator would navigate the account to enter existing vest information, anticipated future needs, and submit requests for reimbursements on qualifying purchases.

"The annual BVP application period typically begins in April and closes six weeks from the opening date. The fiscal year 2023 BVP Program application period opened on April 27, 2023, and closed on June 30, 2023."

Xb SRO

Over the past five-years or so, there have been a number of grants specific to the health and safety in schools. Agencies received multi-year grant funding to pay for full-time SROs to assist with that particular topic. A multi-year grant affords agencies the opportunity to safely backfill special assignments.

Xc Body Worn Cameras (BWC)

The best time to seek funding is likely for an initial startup. The police department already has BWCs but the five-year contract reportedly ends this coming December. Therefore, the timing to secure grant assistance before the end of the contract is not feasible. It seems the next step for the police department is securing a new contract with the current vendor or a new one. The focuses and parameters of the next wave of grant opportunities are not yet known. The chief, however, should be vigilant for offers that may soften the costs of this platform.

Xd Property and Evidence

The creation of a new position to fix a problem is often ripe for grant funding. As discussed earlier, the process of storage and purging evidence is a challenge and one that can become unbearable. Saddling an already full-time employee with this task in not the best approach. Look for a grant that may allow for the hiring of a non-sworn person and equipment to modernize, consolidate, and address the backlog of the Property and Evidence process.

Xe General Information

The research revealed the US Department of Justice recently awarded over $46 million dollars to support public safety efforts in Nevada. The topics receiving grant assistance were broad. Grant opportunities change from year-to-year. Scrutinize the yearly grant announcements (Local, State, Federal) to find those that have the potential to supplement department operations or provide for a particular need in the community.

Further, perhaps a local service organization or business might be interested in sponsoring certain needs or projects such as new policy, K9 maintenance, or the BWC platform. Hudbay Mining may be interested too. Especially in response to the chief demonstrating the potential service population growth and community impacts thereof at the various stages of their project.

XI. Miscellaneous Information Gleaned

Officer Traffic Collisions

There has been one officer-related, at-fault, traffic collision. It occurred roughly three years ago, solo crash, roll-over, and was non-injury. The primary collision factor was speed while heading to a legitimate call for service. The Nevada Highway Patrol was requested to take the report.

Officer – Suspect Injuries During Arrest

None recently.

Last Officer-Involved-Shooting or In-Custody Major Injury or Death Roughly 25+ years ago.

Other Types of On-Duty Injuries Two dog-bites this year

Recent chemical exposure

XII. Conclusion

Discussion

The task at hand is to now coalesce and as a team, decide on the preferred level of public safety services for the City of Yerington. This is a policy issue. The following deliberations when answered would reveal the policy wants which in turn, drives the subsequent conversation that identifies the depth of the organizational chart.

As a baseline to ponder, it would be logical to conclude that the current deployment (i.e. 1 chief, 6 officers, 1 non-sworn for a 24/7 operation) is insufficient and as such, unable to address a number of normal internal and external demands.

- 1. Reactive or Proactive?
- 2. Desirable average response time?
- 3. Enforcement priorities?
- 4. Outreach priorities?
- 5. Minimum number of patrol officers per shift?
- 6. Special Assignments?
- 7. Supervisory / Command Structure
